'Scheduled departure' surprises officials

Top cop to retire? Calderwood says no

by BILL HILL

Arlington Heights Police Chief L. W. Calderwood is "scheduled to retire" July 31, Trustee Frank Palmatier said Thursday.

Palmatier said he had been told by Village Mgr. L. A. Hanson that the 72-year-old police chief is scheduled to retire at the end of July when he completes his 48th year of police service. "That was before this controversy erupted Wednesday night," Palmatier said referring to a letter and two-page report from former Police Capt. Jack Aldrich criticizing the Arlington Heights Police Dept.

Hanson would not comment on Palmatier's statement.

"I have made no arrangements for my retirement. If I have, then I've changed my mind," Calderwood said late Thursday.

OTHER TRUSTEES contacted said they had not been told of a "scheduled" retirement date for Calderwood. Village Pres. James T. Ryan said he had heard "rumors," but nothing definite from either Calderwood or Hanson.

"The subject of his retirement has come up a couple times, but I don't remember any specific dates," Trustee David Griffin said. "But since he's 72, I presume it's a logical thing to occur."

Forty-eight years of service "is a milestone he (Calderwood) wanted to complete," Palmatier said.

Calderwood was named Arlington Heights police chief in 1958 after serving on the Evanston Police Dept. for 29 years.

WHEN CALDERWOOD joined the department, it was housed in several rooms in the old village hall where the Vail Avenue Jewel food store now stands. The police force has grown to 75 officers since 1958.

In a 1975 interview marking his 17th anniversary of command, Calderwood said he wanted to see a new police station built before he retired. After several years of speculation and discussion, Hanson last month presented a proposal to the village board for a new station.

Like any village employe past the age of 65, Calderwood must submit a letter each year to Hanson asking to keep the position another year. "Any employe over 65 serves at the discretion of the village manager," Gregory Ford, personnel director, said.

Last year Calderwood received a salary of $26,300. In the proposed budget for 1976-77, he is slated for a salary of $27,900.

A MOUNT PROSPECT woman was seriously injured Thursday after being pinned underneath the front bumper of her auto that had become stuck in a muddy parking lot in Arlington Heights. Police said Karlyn Blomquist, 42, of 711 Eastman Dr., was trying to push the car but slipped and was caught underneath. She was taken to Northwest Community Hospital, Arlington Heights. Her mother, Esther Brown, 60, was with her at the time and was treated and released from Northwest.

Gas prices plunge as dealers battle

A price war and heavy fuel supplies account for 1 to 2 cents a gallon price cuts by many suburban gasoline dealers this week causing retail prices to dip to the 50-cent to 64-cent a gallon range.

The trend toward gas pump prices in the lower 50s is great for motorists, but dealers are taking it on the chin, said Herbert Hugo, Midwest senior editor for the Platt's Oilgram publication in Chicago. "I really think we'll see several more weeks of price warring before we see any change," Hugo said Thursday.

Hugo said gas prices can drop another penny or two a gallon in the coming weeks. The recent price cuts lower dealer profit margins when they are not supported by wholesale supply price declines, he said.

Price declines reported by Ashland Oil, Clark, Standard Oil of Indiana, Arco and a one cent drop by Phillips Thursday are among oil company cuts.

JACK PARKER, owner of Arlington Park Arco service station, Arlington Heights, said he decreased pump prices 2 cents a gallon last week. "With the price of gasoline as high as it is, people are shopping where they can get the best price," Parker said. He charges 54.3 cent a gallon, mini-service and 57.9 cents a gallon when services such as windshield washing are offered. Since the prices were dropped, more customers choose mini-serve, Parker said.

At the Dan's Ranch Mart Mobil service station in Buffalo Grove, gasoline prices recently dropped one cent. A spokesman for the dealership said the 61.9 cent a gallon price for regular gas will not drop unless Mobil offers price suports or cuts wholesale prices.

A penny-a-gallon price cut is reported by Bob Copeland, manager of the Standard Oil station at 601 E. Devon, Elk Grove Village. He charges 59.3 cents a gallon for gas with mini-service and 64.9 cents a gallon with full service.

Ample supplies of fuel oil and gasoline prompted the recent decrease in wholesale prices, said a spokesman for Standard Oil of Indiana (Amoco) in Chicago.

Drastic cuts, tax hike vote seen to ease Dist. 25 debt

by KATHERINE BOYCE

Nearly $900,000 in budget cuts are expected in Arlington Heights Dist. 25 this fall along with a referendum this spring to increase taxes.

The Dist. 25 Board of Education, meeting as a committee-of-the-whole Thursday, agreed on a referendum and the budget cuts, which include the elimination of 43 teaching positions and the closing of North School.

The actions are planned to offset a projected financial deficit in the district projected for next year and estimated at $3.9 million by 1984. The deficit is caused by a predicted 31 per cent drop in enrollment by 1984 that will result in the loss of state aid.

BOARD MEMBERS agreed Monday the closing of North School, 410

Jitters are universal on ill-fated Friday 13th

by JOE SWICKARD

Ye gads! It's the day of universal triskaidekaphobia.

Before all of you take two aspirins and crawl back under the covers, take a look at the calendar. Yep — it's that day again: Friday the 13th.

Triskaidekaphobia is just the official way of saying the number 13 gives you the heebie-jeebies.

Why does that particular number and day give rise to superstitions in just about every culture? No one is really sure, but there are enough explanations to cover just about all the bases.

Fridays have been getting a bum rap for a long time, according to folklore.

EVE ALLEGEDLY TEMPTED Adam with an apple on a Friday, and we all know what that led to.

The Crucifixion occurred on a Friday, too.

And there are Black Fridays to commemmorate three monumental financial panics of the 19th Century.

If Fridays are a bummer by themselves, just consider what happens when the day is coupled with the ominous 13.

There were 13 persons at the Last Supper.

TO PRESENT A BALANCED picture, the ancient Egyptians thought 13 was pretty good, lucky in fact.

The Egyptians believed that man passed through 12 phases of life and the 13th phase representated immortality. They related it to the 13 annual phases of the moon.

Because this is the Bicentennial, we have to recall that 13 colonies haven't done too badly either.

As long as we're on the subject, here are some more superstitions to keep in mind:

- Knocking or touching wood when making boasts or optimistic statements. It can be traced to either recognition of tree spirits or the wooden cross of the crucifixion.
- Black cats are favorite "familiars" of witches and can bedevil the unwary walker.

If you make it through today, you can relax until August, when the 13th will again fall on a Friday.

But to be on the safe side, why not knock on wood and keep your fingers crossed till tomorrow. Good luck.

Blast overshadows Patty's trial

From Herald news services

SAN FRANCISCO — The government neared the end of its case against Patricia Hearst Thursday by playing in court a tape in which she bragged about taking part in the bank robbery for which she is on trial.

The day's trial events, however, were overshadowed by an explosion, apparently from a terrorist's time bomb, that caused an estimated $1 million damage to art objects in a cottage at the fabulous mountain-top Hearst Castle in San Simeon, built nearly a half century ago by Patricia's grandfather.

A group of 53 persons on tour of the castle had just left the cottage when the blast occurred. No one was injured.

The parents of the 21-year-old heiress said in statements outside the courtroom the San Simeon bombing must have been in retaliation for Miss Hearst's turnabout on the witness stand in which she denounced her Symbionese Liberation Army kidnapers.

"IT'S AN ATTEMPT to terrorize Patty," said her mother, Mrs. Catherine Hearst.

"It shows the vicious, terrible people Patty was with. It's no wonder Patty was afraid of them."

The jury was not aware of the bombing. The last significant evidence it heard in the case on Thursday was the soft but firm voice of the defendant on the often-heard tape recording as it was played at the hushed, packed trial.

"This is Tania," she said.

"On April 15, my comrades and I expropriated $10,660.02 from the Sunset Branch of the Hibernia Bank."

SHE WENT ON to say the idea she was brainwashed was "ridiculous to the point of being beyond belief." She scorned her parents and called fiance Steven Weed a "sexist pig."

It was the climax of the prosecution's case in which it called 32 witnesses over 11 days to try to prove that Miss Hearst was a willing participant in the bank robbery and that she did not act out of deathly fear of her kidnapers.

Some cold 'cures' harmful: panel

WASHINGTON (UPI) — If a cough, sore throat and runny nose have laid you low, a panel of medical experts says it could be because the cold remedy you bought doesn't work or — even worse — may be unsafe.

A seven-member medical board has submitted to the Food and Drug administration tentative findings of a 3½-year study of ingredients in cough and cold medicines that can be bought without prescriptions.

The group is expected to make findings and recommendations in its 946-page study final next month.

Among tentative findings are:

- Although Vitamin C is widely proclaimed as useful in preventing or treating colds, "the panel found no study which demonstrated Vitamin C is unquivocally effective."
- Some cold remedies use small amounts of turpentine oil, the same poisonous substance used as a paint thinner.

The group made no tests of specific brands but did mention ingredients used in some well-known cold remedies. Belladonna alkaloids, used in "Contac" and other over-the-counter medicines to stop runny noses, was labeled as having "great potential for drug abuse and toxicity."

State's attorney candidate Moore says:

'Howlett stonewalling the press'

by WANDALYN RICE

Sec. of State Michael Howelett is "stonewalling" on the subject of the $100,000 in 1974 campaign contributions, Donald Page Moore, Democratic candidate for Cook County State's Attorney, said Thursday.

In a Herald interview, Moore, who as a federal prosecutor won conviction of Bobby Baker, a top aide to President Lyndon Johnson in the 1960s, likened Howlett's use of the money to Baker's financial manipulations.

Moore is running against Edward Egan, the candidate endorsed by Chicago Mayor Richard J. Daley and the Cook County Democratic Party in the March 16 primary. Moore has the backing of Gov. Daniel Walker, Howlett's opponent in the gubernatorial primary.

IN REFUSING to detail how he used the $100,000, Moore said, "Mr. Howlett is stonewalling the press. He's starting a coverup and we know when people start a coverup there is something to uncover."

Moore said Howlett may have converted the campaign contributions to his personal use and said if he was state's attorney he would investigate the action.

Howlett disclosed this week that he paid tax on the campaign funds on the advice of his attorney. He made the announcement during a press conference called to explain his relationship with Sun Steel Co. of Chicago Heights, a firm from which he drew a $15,000 consultant's salary while serving as state auditor and secretary of state.

HOWLETT HAS said he used the $100,000 to pay back a personal loan used for his 1972 campaign. He refused to say how he spent the loan funds, except to say they were used for campaign purposes and not for personal expenses.

Moore said Bobby Baker was convicted of grand theft and fraud in the 1960s because he took money given him to allegedly bribe senators and used it for his own business affairs.

"We prosecuted Baker for grand theft and fraud because he lied to those people. If you tell people you are taking money for one purpose and use it for another purpose, that's theft and fraud," Moore said.

Moore was an unsuccessful candidate for state's attorney in the 1972 Democratic primary, a three-way race involving Edward Hanrahan and Raymond Berg.

Walker raps college tuition hikes

Gov. Daniel Walker said Thursday he will reject tuition increases proposed last month for state universities by the Illinois Board of Higher Education.

The proposed increases would raise undergraduate tuition by $60 a year and graduate tuition by $90 a year.

"These tuition increases would hurt the people who can least afford it — families in the middle income area who have been hard hit by inflation," Walker said.

The Illinois Board of Higher Education's January staff report defended the proposed tuition hikes because "the quality of educational services is endangered when tuition charges are not increased in a period of high inflation. Since personal income also increases with inflation, the tuition assessed to students who are able to pay becomes increasingly smaller in proportion to available income."

THE TUITION increases are part of the Illinois Board of Higher Education 1976-77 budget which must be approved by the Illinois General Assembly and Walker.

Walker, a consistent foe of state university tuition hikes in the past, said the cost of books, supplies, housing and food already have strained the budgets of college students in the state.

"A tuition increase added to this burden will force many students to drop out of school. Some high school students may not be able to begin their college education," Walker said.

"A tuition increase which denies people access to a college education defeats the purpose of our state university system — providing education to all who seek it," he added.

State board officials could not be reached for comment because of the state holiday Thursday.

Murder suspect dies of wounds

A Hanover Park man who allegedly shot his wife to death Tuesday and then shot himself, died Thursday of gunshot wounds suffered in the apparent murder-suicide. A spokesman for Alexian Brothers Medical Center, Elk Grove Village, said Raymond Buenger, 35, of 1501 Cypress Ct., died in the hospital at 12:30 p.m. Police in Hanover Park said Buenger allegedly shot his wife Nancy, 33, twice in the head and chest during an argument in their home. He then shot himself in the head with the .38-caliber pistol, police said. Both were found lying on the kitchen floor of their home. Two of their four children were home at the time but were not injured.

Auto mishaps injure two

Two persons were in serious condition at Northwest Community Hospital, Arlington Heights, Thursday after being injured in separate auto accidents. Charles Conroy, 59, of Mauston, Wis., suffered multiple cuts, fractures and internal injuries after being struck by an auto he was trying to flag down on the Northwest Tollway east of Barrington Rd., State police said Conroy was seeking help because his car broke down. Later Thursday, Karlyn Blomquist, 42, of 711 Eastman Dr., Mount Prospect, was hospitalized after being pinned under the front bumper of her auto at Rand and Arlington Heights roads. Arlington Heights police said she was trying to push her car after it got stuck in a muddy parking lot. She had put the car in reverse but it began to roll, pinning her underneath, police said.

Oakton faces funding holdup

Construction of a permanent campus in Des Plaines for Oakton Community College may face a "crisis" in two weeks because the state is holding up funding. The Illinois Capital Development Board, which has final approval on construction budgets for all state agencies, has told the college to trim $1.7 million from its $12.7 million campus construction budget. David Hilquist, vice president of business and finances for Oakton, said college officials have sent a letter to the state board asking for reconsideration of the budget cut. Hilquist said the development board's decision could delay construction of the campus and may throw construction plans into a "crisis" in about two weeks.

Delay urged in picking health unit

The Northwest Municipal Conference has requested a five-month delay in the designation of a Health Systems Agency for suburban Cook and DuPage Counties.

Three coalitions are vying for recognition as the Health Systems Agency by the U.S. Dept. of Health Education and Welfare.

The final designee, to be chosen by HEW with the advice of Gov. Daniel Walker, will have broad powers over hospital expenditures and administration, medical associations, ambulance and paramedic services and other health-related facilities.

The three applications are marked by lawsuits and political infighting.

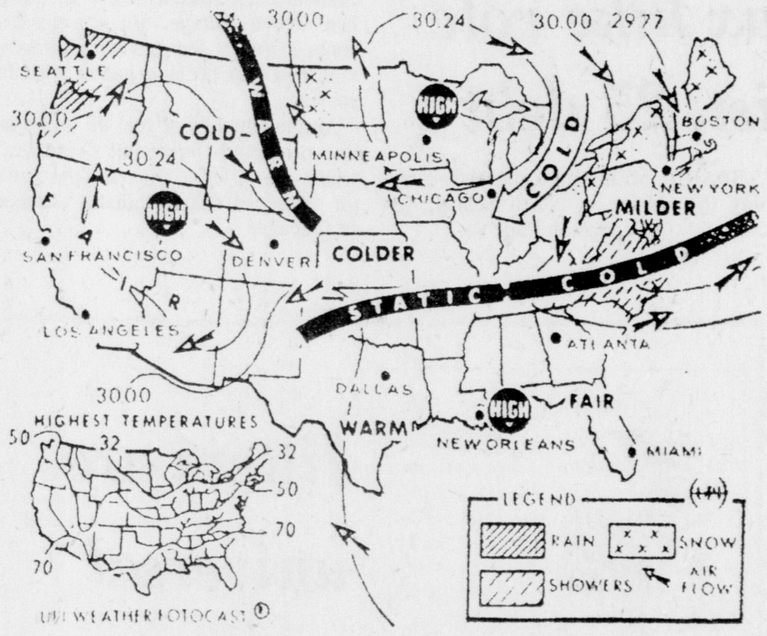

The Northwest Municipal Conference, which represents 16 Northwest suburbs, advocated the three applicants work together for a common application.

The conference's position was stated by William Muhlenfeld, director, at a recent public hearing on the Health Systems Agency applications.

Zaire fears invasion by Angolan Reds

by United Press International

Soviet tanks and Cuban troops smashed through the last defenses of pro-Western forces in Angola Thursday, driving the outgunned anti-Communist soldiers into the bush to take up guerrilla war. Neighboring Zaire said it feared invasion by the victorious Communist armies.

Zaire's Foreign Minister, Karl Ibond Nguza, said in London Zaire has "reason to believe" the Soviet-armed and Cuban-led forces of the Popular Movement for the Liberation of Angola "will not just stay where they are but will have the temptation to go next door."

Nguza, who had been in Washington for talks with President Ford and Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger on Angola, said the Popular Movement army had 6,000 deserters from the former Katanga gendarmerie who fled to Angola after the Congo civil war.

"So we have reason to believe our own security is deeply involved," Nguza said. "Zaire will be a nice ground for subversion. We believe there is real cause for concern about our own security."

Jorge Sangumba, spokesman for the pro-Western National Union for the Total Independence of Angola, said the movement had guns for a "10-year guerrilla campaign, but we cannot fight the Russian tanks."

In Washington, meantime, a group of "rejected" Vietnam veterans associated with the Congress for Racial Equality is training in the Washington area to fight in Angola, it was reported Thursday.

The Veterans Opportunity Project, led by former officers who maintain their rank to preserve a chain of command, would not say who is paying their expenses, the Washington Star reported.

VOP is loosely affiliated with CORE, which has said it hopes to send 1,500 men from the Washington area to Angola. CORE, originally a civil rights group, is recruiting in Baltimore, Los Angeles and Philadelphia.

In another development, the State Department said Thursday two American pilots were arrested when their plane landed in Angola. The Soviet-backed Popular Movement for the Liberation of Angola called it a "mercenary plane."

The men were identified as pilot Roger A. Carley of Miami Shores, Fla., and copilot Richard Fusakio of Wilton Manors, Fla.

Blast overshadows Patty's trial

newspaper empire founder William Randolph Hearst, who built San Simeon, called the terrorist blast an "outrage."

Wiliiam Randolph Hearst brought back great art treasures from Europe and built a castle with huge stones made from ancient palaces of that continent. The guest houses also were adorned with priceless paintings, sculpture, furniture and rugs. The cost of the project was estimated at between $30 and $40 million.

AFTER HIS DEATH, the estate was willed to the state of California although the Hearst family still stays at one of the guest houses occasionally.

"It was a stupid, vicious thing to do to the people of California," Hearst said.

"The people who perpetrated it are of the same mentality as those who killed Marcus Foster and kidnaped Patricia Hearst."

Foster was the Oakland school superintendent murdered by SLA members Joseph Remiro and Joseph Little who have been convicted and sentenced to life imprisonment.

Defense attorney F. Lee Bailey said Miss Hearst had been in fear of retribution.

"ON THE FIRST DAY of the trial she was in tears because she was afraid someone would try to blow up her or her parents," he said.

Miss Hearst wiped her nose with a handkerchief after listening to the emotional tape recording made four days after the April 14, 1974 bank robbery. A member of the defense team sitting next to her said she was not crying.

U.S. Atty. James L. Browning said he intended to complete his case about 11 a.m. Friday. Bailey said his first witness would be Patricia's former fiance, Steven Weed.

U.S. Circuit Judge Oliver J. Carter approved a defense request to take the defendant and jury Monday to the branch office of the Hibernia Bank where the holdup occurred and to the two apartments where Miss Hearst says she was held in a closet after her kidnaping.

THE FINAL WITNESS for the prosecution was FBI agent Thomas Padden who was one of two officers who arrested Miss Hearst and Wendy Hoshimura in San Francisco on Sept. 18, 1975.

He told of going to their apartment.

"I drew my weapon as I went up the back stairs," he said.

I observed two females through the window in the back door. I said, 'FBI, freeze.' They did not immediately comply so I repeated the order. They did not comply because they were in the middle of getting up from the table.

"MISS YOSHIMURA complied and Miss Hearst continued to move. I told her to freeze or I'd blow her head off."

"Would you in fact have blown her head off?" asked Browning.

"No."

"Did she freeze then?"

"Yes."

Padden was preceded by seven other FBI agents who told of finding weapons in the apartments where Miss Hearst and Emily and William Harris were captured. They also identified Miss Hearst's fingerprints as having been found in the Harris apartment.

The jury has not yet heard the defendant on the witness stand. She testified outside their presence in a hearing on the admissibility of evidence about the voluntariness of her actions after the bank robbery.

At the trial Friday afternoon they read from a written transcript as the voice of "Tania" floated across the courtroom.

"To those people who still believe that I am brainwashed or dead, I see no reason to further defend my position," she said at the end.

The prosecution was expected to complete its case Friday morning.

Expert views marijuana...

Booze, cigarets 'worse'

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Alcohol and cigarets are far more dangerous to the health of the user than marijuana, the government's top official on drug abuse said Thursday.

Dr. Robert DuPont, head of the National Institute on Drug Abuse, also gave his personal view that civil penalities should be substituted for criminal prosecution in cases of mere possession of marijuana.

"There is no question, that alcohol and tobacco are causing us far more health problems than marijuana does," he told a news conference called to discuss the government's fifth annual report to Congress on marijuana and health, released Monday.

DuPont previously has avoided drawing comparisions among the three most widely used "recreational" drugs. Thursday, however, he said that while none of the drugs is safe, marijuana lacks the "lethal effects" of either alcohol or tobacco.

Furthermore, said DuPont, young persons are more likely to take up alcohol and tobacco first, then move on to marijuana, than the other way around.

In a written statement, DuPont emphasized that the report concerns strictly the health aspects of marijuana use and does not reflect administration social policy.

He was asked what advice he had for the parents of teenagers who use marijuana.

"I would advise them not to get so terribly up tight . . . and to talk with them about the consequences of their decisions," he said. "My advice is if they are not using any of the three drugs, don't take it up.

"There are health risks associated with all of the drugs. If a young person does use one (of the drugs), I would encourage them to use less of it."

Heavy and steady marijuana use can cause respiratory problems like bronchitis, DuPont said, and its intoxicating effects can make driving and use of industrial equipment hazardous.

Despite these potential effects, he said, marijuana lacks the life-threatening overdose threat of alcohol and is much less likely to cause health problems than cigarets.

DuPont also said he favors doing away with jail sentences for simple possession of marijuana.

"Personally," he said, "my view is that we do not have to threaten young people with imprisonment to discourage use of marijuana."

Kissinger hits intelligence leak as 'new McCarthyism'

WASHINGTON (UPI) — His voice cracking with emotion, Secretary of State Henry Kissinger said Thursday the leaked House intelligence committee report has bred "a new version of McCarthyism" in which officials like him "can be destroyed by the most flagrant charges."

He said he would consider resigning if the alleged smear campaign reduces his ability to conduct foreign policy, but made clear he has no present intention of doing so.

He said leaked versions of the suppressed House report, highly critical of him personally and the intelligence services in general, had spread "the impression of a malicious lie."

At a news conference, the normally jovial and confidant Kissinger dealt with this issue in a voice clearly strained with anger and emotion. It cracked as he spoke and he seemed to work hard to control himself.

The House voted to block publication of the 340-page intelligence report unless President Ford has a chance to censor classified intelligence information. But much of the document has leaked to the press and a New York newspaper, the Village Voice, published lengthy excerpts Wednesday.

A reporter asked Kissinger to comment "on the dozens of charges against you" raised by the intelligence panel headed by Rep. Otis Pike, D-N.Y. The report claimed Kissinger's "passion for secrecy" had damaged U. S. policy and implied he lied to Congress about Soviet violations of nuclear arms treaties.

"It is extremely difficult to reply to charges in a leaked document," Kissinger replied.

Henry Kissinger

He said the committee had misused "highly classified information . . . in a manner so distorted that the total impact is to produce a malicious lie.

"Therefore even when the documents themselves are correct, they are taken out of context and they are so fitted into a preconceived pattern that we are facing here a new version of McCarthyism."

Asked whether he were considering resigning, Kissinger said: "If I should conclude that it is in the interests of American foreign policy, I would step down.

President Ford, meantime, offered House Speaker Carl Albert the FBI to help find who leaked the report. Ford insisted the leak was not from the executive branch.

A spokesman said Albert was reading the full report and had no immediate response to Ford's offer.

Ford's offer of help from the executive branch to track a news leak was seen as unusual.

Now the students are hugging too. We find it's a more spontaneous, natural thing to do than shaking hands." Plut said the habit started three years ago after he heard a lecture on love.

SEC files suit for Boeing documents

The Securities and Exchange Commission filed suit Thursday to require Boeing Co. to turn over documents on an alleged fund used to pay foreign government officials. The SEC suit, filed in U.S. District Court, is similar to one filed against Lockheed Aircraft Corp. for similar practices last year. Boeing, a Seattle based aerospace company, is one of the nation's largest defense contractors and the world's biggest producer of commercial jetliners. Acting almost simultaneously with the SEC move, Boeing denied it has made any illegal political payoffs at home or abroad.

Sen. William Proxmire, D-Wis., meanwhile, said the Senate Banking Committee will launch an investigation to determine whether payment of bribes has crippled Lockheed Cororation's ability to repay $250 million in government guaranteed loans.

W. T. Grant Co. declared bankrupt

The 70-year-old W.T. Grant Co., once the nation's third largest variety store chain but now down to 359 stores with 24,000 employes, was declared bankrupt in New York Thursday and ordered to liquidate its assets. Federal Bankruptcy Judge John Galgal signed the liquidation order which will put the firm out of business within 60 days.

Belfast girds for revenge 'holocaust'

IRA hunger striker Frank Stagg died in a London jail Thursday. His Irish rebel comrades then vowed violent revenge for their "debt of honor" and a spate of bombings, bus burnings and gunfire erupted in Belfast. Stagg, 34, died on the 61st day of a hunger strike to press his demand for transfer from Wakefield jail, 200 miles north of London, to a Northern Ireland prison. Within hours of Stagg's death, a Roman Catholic backlash erupted in the streets of Belfast and the British government ordered thousands of troops and police on alert against a threatened IRA "holocaust" of revenge.

Guatemalan deaths rise to 19,000

U.S. AID director Daniel Parker, a special emissary of President Ford, arrived in Guatemala Thursday to personally assess the earthquake damage. The death toll from last week's quake has now risen to nearly 19,000, with another 62,432 injured. According to official figures, 1,066,063 persons — one-fifth of the nation — were left homeless in the quake.

Dayan: Israel has nuclear capability

Former Defense Minister Moshe Dayan says Israel already has the capability to deliver nuclear bombs on enemy targets and does not have to depend on long-range U.S. Pershing missiles. "We must keep the atomic option without depending on the United States," he told a public meeting Wednesday night. Israeli censorship prevented publication of key portions of Dayan's comments until Thursday. He said Israel needs Pershing missiles only to counter Soviet-supplied Scud and Frog missiles used by the armies of neighboring Arab states.

Tuition hike expected

Catholic teachers given 7% raise

by PAM BIGFORD

A 7 per cent salary increase granted to elementary teachers by the Archdiocese of Chicago will mean tuition hikes next year in many Northwest Suburban Catholic schools.

John Topper, principal of St. Joseph the Worker School, 171 W. Dundee, Wheeling, said the salary increase "does not come as a surprise."

"In fact, we had anticipated a much higher raise," Topper said. "The teachers haven't had a raise above their regular step increase in two years, so it was expected."

Topper said the raise "won't make any difference whatsoever" to the budget of his school because tuition at St. John the Worker already has been raised for the 1976-77 school year, and a salary hike was anticipated.

"I THINK THE Catholic schools throughout the area have maintained a pretty reasonable tuition rate," Topper said, and as the cost of everything else goes up people will have to realize the cost of education must rise too.

Sister Lorraine, principal of Queen of the Rosary School, 690 E. Elk Grove Blvd., Elk Grove Village, agreed the salary increase was "expected, just as salary increases are anyplace else."

Sister Lorraine said tuition at her school will go up next year, "but not a big jump." She said tuition there has not been raised for two years.

The 7 per cent average salary increase includes a regular increase given teachers for an additional year of experience averaging 4.2 per cent, plus a 2 per cent base salary hike, and a 7 per cent increase in fringe benefits.

A FIRST YEAR teacher with a bachelor's degree now receives $7,362 and will receive $7,515 under the new salary schedule. A teacher with a bachelor's degree and 10 years of experience now receiving $10,647 will make $10,863 in 1976-77. Teachers with masters' degrees receive an additional $500.

In comparison, a beginning teacher with a bachelor's degree in Schaumburg Township Dist. 54 is paid $9,450. In Elk Grove Township, Dist. 59 and Palatine-Rolling Meadows Dist. 15, the same teacher receives $9,500.

Elementary Catholic school teachers will receive $10,863 in their 10th year and then will see no raises until their 15th year of experience when they will receive $11,367. After that, no increases are received until they reach their 20th year at the top of the schedule at $11,871.

I N COMPARISON, elementary teachers in many Northwest suburban public schools who are at the top of their salary schedules receive almost $20,000.

Teachers who have bachelor's degrees but no accreditation will receive a 6.7 per cent average increase. A beginning teacher in this category now receiving $6,264 will receive $6,453.

Teaching nuns will receive a 6.7 per cent salary increase, from $4,450 to $4,750.

In 1974-75, the cost of operating the 392 elementary schools in the Archdiocesan School system increased 7 per cent over 1973-74, raising total costs for elementary schools to $75.3 million.

The Archdiocesan Board recommended local parish school boards intensify efforts to review resource allocations, increase tuition and fund-raising, and apply to the State Supt. of Public Instruction for relief in textbook acquisition.

Record budget for Illinois schools

A record $1.89 billion education budget for the 1977 fiscal year was approved Thursday by the Illinois Board of Education.

The budget includes a request for $100 million in state funds for schools this spring. The supplemental appropriation is being asked to replace funds cut from appropriations last summer by Gov. Daniel Walker. Walker has said he will oppose the request because the state has no additional funds for schools this year.

The education budget approved by the state board for the 1977 fiscal year, which begins July 1, is $327 million higher than this year, an increase of about 21 per cent. If the supplemental appropriation is approved the budget increase would be $227 million, about 14 per cent.

THE LARGEST single item in the budget is state aid, about $1.35 billion, an increase of $244 million or $112 million depending on whether the supplemental appropriation is approved this spring.

Two new programs in the budget, a free text book program for all schools and a teacher hearing examiner appeal for dismissed teachers, were approved for state funding by the legislature last year.

The board's education budget provides for full funding of state aid to schools under the current resource equalizer formula. The budget must now be approved by the Illinois Bureau of the Budget and the Governor's Office.

WALKER HAS SAID he does not intend to fully fund the state aid formula in 1977 because the state cannot afford to without a tax increase.

In other action Thursday, state board members said they will push for legislation giving them power to distribute state aid according to the state aid formula.

Tuesday a Sangamon County Circuit Court Judge ruled the state board must distribute aid based on the amount actually appropriated by the legislature rather than the amount to which schools are entitled under the aid formula.

The ruling came as a result of a suit instituted by Walker who has insisted the board prorate aid according to the appropriation. State board members Thursday said they will appeal the case.

Hospital officials object to new Medicaid plan

The new Medicaid payment controls proposed by Gov. Daniel Walker's administration amount to a hidden tax on private hospital patients and their insurance companies, hospital officials said Thursday.

"It amounts to hidden taxation because the costs not paid by the state are being passed on to private paying patients and their insurance companies," Robert W. O'Leary, president of the Illinois Hospital Assn., said at a news conference.

Gerald Mungerson, head of the Chicago Hospital Council, said, "The load is falling on the private patient."

Mungerson, also director of Illinois Masonic Hospital, said his institution's patients are paying an extra $27 a day because of the state's failure to fully reimburse Medicaid costs.

THE ILLINOIS Public Aid Dept. filed suit in federal court Tuesday asking the court to forbid HEW from blocking a new rate structure IDPA has proposed for distributing Medicaid payments to hospitals.

The proposed rate structure has only been calculated for 84 of the state's 270 hospitals so far. Of those figured, 39 would receive more money than they now get and 45 would receive less, Public Aid Director James L. Trainor said.

Trainor says the controls are designed to eliminate wide discrepancies in charges to the state by similar hospitals in similar areas for the same types of services.

O'Leary called the suit a delaying tactic "to cover up the financial deficiencies of this administration at the expense of the public and the taxpayers."

He also charged that individual hospitals were being pressured "to keep them from making any public protest of this scandalous situation."

Bottler donates pure water to Guatemala

A local water bottler, Purity Water Co., Elk Grove Village, has donated a truck load, nearly 1,500 gallons, of bottled water to aid victims of the Guatemalan earthquake.

The truck load of pure drinking water was delivered in gallon jugs to the Medical Assistance Program in Carol Stream to be airlifted to Guatemala, the company reported Thursday.

Panel plans investigation of vandalism within village

A communitywide study of vandalism in Arlington Heights will be undertaken by the antivandalism committee.

The committee, chaired by Trustee Robert Miller, will investigate the problem as it relates to schools, parks, village government, private homes and businesses.

Subcommittees to study each of the areas will try to "put it into real terms" of what the cost of vandalism is in Arlington Heights.

The formation of subcommittees with areas of concentration came during the committee's initial meeting, a wide-range discussion of vandalism and its causes.

Committee member Lt. Paul Buckholz, head of the police juvenile bureau, told the group that in 1975 about 1,800 children under the age of 17 were arrested for crimes ranging from burglaries to narcotics to acts of vandalism.

MILLER SAID that last year in Arlington Heights Dist. 25 acts of vandalism cost the schools $35,400.

"That's two or three teachers that couldn't be hired because of vandalism," he said.

Miller said the full committee should report its preliminary findings to the village board within two months. He said he wanted a final report with recommendations and possible solutions by summer, the traditional vandalism season.

COMMITTEE MEMBER Arthur Gollberg said making the community aware of the problems and getting it involved in possible solutions have been the greatest hurdles that similar groups in other towns have had to overcome.

"This meeting has been held hundreds and hundreds of times all across the country," Gollberg said.

He said other studies had found that most acts of vandalism could be broken into three types: those committed on the spur of the moment; those done for kicks or thrills and those committed in retaliation.

THE VALENTINE'S DAY HEART

The heart has long been the traditional symbol of Valentine's Day. And every February heart-shaped cards and heart-shaped candy boxes abound as people all over tell of their love for another.

YOUR HEART IS VERY PRECIOUS

It is fitting that with Valentine's Day upon us we take a moment to think about the good health of our hearts and how to recognize when it might be in trouble.

KNOW THE EARLY WARNING SIGNS

Most heart attack deaths occur before the victim gets to a hospital.

1. Prolonged, oppressive pain or unusual discomfort in center of the chest.
2. Pain may radiate to shoulder, arm, neck or jaw.
3. Sweating may accompany pain or discomfort.
4. Nausea, vomiting and shortness of breath may also occur.
5. Symptoms may go away and then return.

ACT IMMEDIATELY—MINUTES COUNT

Call a doctor and carefully describe the symptoms. If a doctor is not immediately available, get to a hospital emergency room at once. Remember, the decision to call for help is too important to leave to the victim alone. Family, friends and associates must be ready to help.

BE PREPARED TO ACT

Keep a list of numbers — doctor, hospital and ambulance — next to your telephone and in a prominent place in your pocket, wallet or purse.

Eatery, nursing home plans OKd

Plans for a restaurant and nursing home on realigned Arlington Road, just south of Dundee Road have been aproved by the Arlington Heights Plan Commission.

Developer Irving Lefokovitz proposed a 240-bed nursing home and a restaurant and lounge near the north industrial park. Although on the same parcel of land, the restaurant and the nursing home will be in separate buildings.

Operators of the restaurant and lounge will be the same management as Fiddler's Restaurant, Mount Prospect. Live entertainment is planned for the lounge, although the type of acts was not disclosed.

William Moore, attorney representing Lefkovitz, said persons visiting relatives at the nursing home would be able to take them to dinner at the restaurant.

The development will be referred to the village for final action. Although no date for that hearing has been set, Moore requested that it be taken up at the first meeting in March.

Missionary plans talk

John Vanden Akker, a missionary in Liberia, will give a series of talks at the First Baptist Church through Sunday.

Topics will include "A Day in the Life of Nyaa," "Life in the Secret Devil Bush Society," "Life and Mission Station" and "Trekking to a Jungle Town."

To explain emotional ills

Mental health unit plans public education project

by JOE SWICKARD

The Northwest Mental Health Assn. is trying to get emotional problems out from under the rug and into the light.

The association, which operates the Northwest Mental Health Center in the Westgate Shopping Center in Arlington Heights, plans to begin a series of community-level educational programs to increase understanding of mental health and illness.

The programs, beginning with seminars and workshops, are designed not only to spread the word of the association's services, but also to educate people about the nature of mental illness.

"People won't be getting a quickie cure, although some attending the lectures are looking for answers. Really, they are designed to better the understanding of mental health," said Jerry Medow, executive director of the association.

WHILE THE POPULAR image of the suburbs is an area of affluence, with Ozzie and Harriet as neighbors on one side and Jim Anderson and the Father Knows Best outfit on the other, reality does not bear this out.

"When people talk about the suburban area, they often talk about affluence. However, 30 per cent of our clients meet the federal requirements for aid in social services," Medow said.

The association and the center offer their services on a sliding fee scale, with the patient paying what he can afford. Some pay nothing or a minimal fee of 25 or 30 cents per visit, while others pay the full fees.

JERRY MEDOW

Suburbia is just like most other communities and the problems people face are almost universal, Medow said.

ONE PROBLEM not uncommon to the area, is the depressed housewife in her 40s, he said. The children are growing or grown and the pressures of life are starting to get to her, he said.

"They start wondering 'is it worth it?' All the competing and worrying about keeping up with the Smiths and Jones because they have two cars and you don't," Medow said.

For those who do turn to the center, there are many options, including individual treatment, marital therapy, family therapy, group therapy, socialization programs for former hospital patients and medical therapy.

A person's or a family's needs may be met through a combination of the programs or referrals to other agencies, Medow said.

TO MEET THE NEEDS of the community, the center is open 65 hours a week with a 24-hour telephone answering service.

The center receives 57 per cent of its funding from the state, with other sources of revenue coming from local United Funds, federal revenue sharing funds through townships governments and client fees.

It is staffed with five full-time social workers, a full-time psychiatric nurse, two part-time social workers and three part-time psychiatrists.

Medow said the role of the community based mental health organizations will become more important because of recent court decisions and governmental money problems.

RECENTLY A COURT held that patients in mental hospitals could be confined against their wills only in case of homicidal or suicidal tendencies.

The state, facing financial problems, is cutting the population of state hospitals and funding more agencies with a proportionally smaller amount of the budget.

The result of the two trends, Medow said, is a greater load to be borne by local-level organizations such as his. With the increased load, old fears, about mental illness will have to be overcome, he said.

Village seeks way to avoid money woes

A fiscal policy-planning committee to project the long-range financial situation for Arlington Heights will be proposed Monday by Village Pres. James T. Ryan.

"The financial plight of New York City is not an isolated case," Ryan said. "As the financial picture for cities throughout the country becomes more serious and the future of federal revenue sharing more uncertain, despite the calls for its continuation by most local government officials, the need for a new attitude becomes more and more essential.

"The fiscal policy planning committee will review present and future fiscal policies of the village and will be responsible for developing recommendations for dealing with the fiscal problems facing village government," he said.

A SIMILAR COMMITTEE was called for in November by former Village Pres. Ralph Clarbour. Trustee David Griffin also has suggested such a committee in recent months.

The committee probably will have five members with "financial expertise," Ryan said.

Revenues have not been increasing at the same pace as village operating costs, according to administration officials. In one year, the price of gasoline has gone up 57 per cent, the cost of fire hydrants has risen 55 per cent, and copy paper now costs 84 per cent more.

"Inflation has hit the public sector as well as the private sector, but there are major differences," Ryan said. "Our cost increases cannot be passed onto the customer as readily as in the private sector.

"We must look ahead, so that we can come to grips with our potential problems, rather than merely reacting to them," he said.

In addition to projecting the income and expenditures of the village for the next five years, Ryan will ask the committee to investigate how future population growth will affect the financial situation, the consequences of inflation and the potential growth of the village's tax base.

Trustee to urge police force study

by BILL HILL

Trustee Frank Palmatier Monday will ask the Arlington Heights Village Board to hire an outside consultant to analyze the operating procedures of the Arlington Heights Police Dept.

Palmatier's suggestion is in response to former Police Capt. Jack Aldrich's letter and detailed report criticizing the department.

Aldrich, who left Arlington Heights in September to become police chief in Barrington Hills, said in a letter released Wednesday that he retired because of "a frustration about the indirection" of the police department.

Aldrich's report on departmental problems charged that budget work for the department "has been done in one to two hours actual time for the past 17 years."

THE REPORT ALSO says the department "stores all criminal data, no matter how trivial or how old," and that statistical data is not used in planning.

"Until this incident, I was thinking of suggesting a consultant be hired to make a study of the department after the administration got its analysis on space needs together," Palmatier said. "But now that these allegations have been made, I think we'd better do this without delay."

The village administration, which last month proposed a new police station be built, has been directed to conduct a study on the police department's needs.

"We ought to ask the consultant we hire to analyze space needs at the same time," Palmatier said. "We need to get a neutral viewpoint. The public could then have some independent confidence in the study."

PALMATIER SAID he had been told Aldrich was dissatisfied before he left, but speculated that he left when he did because "he could hardly afford to stay in Arlington Heights (because of retirement pensions), even as police chief."

Aldrich, 50, receives 40 per cent of the salary he was last paid in Arlington Heights — $22,400 per year — in retirement payments as well as a salary in excess of $20,000 from Barrington Hills.

Palmatier and other trustees objected to Aldrich's letter being delivered at Wednesday's budget hearing by former Trustee Alice Harms.

"I don't like the way Alice has given the retiring chief a kick in the pants," Palmatier said. Palmatier was the only trustee who said he knew of the chief's retirement.

TRUSTEE Robert Miller, who walked out of the hearing when Mrs. Harms distributed the Aldrich report, said "it showed complete ignorance of any knowledge of administrative procedures.

"I don't know why it was submitted to each member of the board directly by Aldrich. We wouldn't have just sat on it. This encourages any dissident employe to submit a letter to Alice," Miller said.

Aldrich's letter may force "a harmful reactioh," Miller said.

"NOW WE HAVE TO go out and try to find problems in the police department to justify the letter, or else we'll be accused of covering them up. It only causes more problems if we don't find something wrong," he said.

Village Pres. James T. Ryan, who said the Aldrich letter will definitely be discussed at the village board meeting Monday, also objected to the method of submitting the letter.

"I don't know why this had to be handled on a political basis through a former disgruntled trustee. The manner this was brought up reeks of sensationalism," Ryan said. He said he will ask a special meeting be held with Aldrich. "He has an obligation to come in and talk to us. I want to know if he's disgruntled because he didn't become chief while he was here."

Police bid for cars, men rejected

The Arlington Heights Police Dept. request for 11 new patrolmen and 5 additional squad cars has been rejected by Village Mgr. L. A. Hanson in the proposed budget for 1976-77.

Hanson's proposed police department budget was tentatively approved by the village board's finance committee at a budget hearing Wednesday.

During extensive questioning from the village trustees, Police Chief L. W. Calderwood said the additional cars are needed for detectives and squad commanders. He went along with Hanson's rejection of the request for additional patrolmen.

"Considering the facility down there, we probably don't have room for the additional men. But with unions in operation, we have to be open to their requests," Calderwood said.

The request for more patrolmen "was more of an (FOP) (Fraternal Order of Police) request than a department recommendation," he said.

HANSON ESTIMATED Thursday that 11 additional patrolmen would cost the village $139,000 and that the cost of five new squad cars would total $26,000.

The finance committee did approve the police department's request to purchase 30 portable radios at a total cost of $52,000. The radios will be paid for in five yearly installments of about $9,000, with a finance charge of $8,600.

At the request of Trustee Robert Miller, the village is investigating the possibility of purchasing only 25 radios, instead of 30, and still receiving the special discount price.

The radios to be replaced will be given to auxiliary policemen and certain "trusted civilians" to form a watch operation in hopes of curbing vandalism in the village.

Parks, builders confirm 15-acre land lease pact

An agreement has been reached between the Arlington Heights Park District and Miller Builders for the leasing of 15 acres adjacent to Riley School.

Under terms of the agreement, the district will take title to the land by Dec. 31, 1981. The district will lease the land until it takes possession.

According to the agreement worked out between the village, the park district and Miller Builders, the land would be turned over to the park district before the 1981 deadline if the developers get approval for the subdivision of the Northgate unit or if they sell the land.

THE DEVELOPMENT of the park, planned for the past five years, has been delayed because of the slump in the building market. Miller Builders maintained they did not want to turn over the land until they were sure how the entire parcel would be developed.

The park district had done some rough grading of the site and planned installation of equipment, but full development was impossible because they did not have title to the land.

Park Comr. Jacquelyn Gruenewald, while voting in favor of the agreement, said it was a "shoddy deal."

Mrs. Gruenewald said the district was "breaking faith" with residents in the area because the agreement has the five-year timetable.

She said of the new pact, "It's not good enough, but it's better than nothing, which is what we had before — nothing."

In other action, the district annexed 49 acres of the Ivy Hill subdivision south of the Commonwealth Edison Co. right-of-way along McDonald Creek.

'New facilities unnecessary in Unit Dist. 59'

No additional facilities will be needed if Elk Grove Township Dist. 59 forms a unit district, consultants said Thursday.

Declining enrollment during the next five years in elementary, junior high and high school buildings will eliminate the need for additional schools, said David Schmid of Illinois School Consultants, hired by Dist. 59 to provide information on forming a unit district.

A citizens committee formed by Dist. 59 is in the midst of studying the unit concept, which would combine elemetary, junior high and high schools into one district governed by one board of education. Dist. 59 is one of seven elementary school districts in High School Dist. 214.

Schmid said kindergarten enrollment in Dist. 59 is projected to drop 13.6 per cent from 1,509 this year to 863 in the 1980-81 school year. Elementary school enrollment will drop 16 per cent from 5,197 this year to 4,346 in the 1980-81 school year. Junior high enrollment will fall 20.4 per cent from 4,082 to 3,248 and high school enrollment will go down 14 per cent from 5,284 to 4,524.

THE DISTRICT anticipates using the current Dist. 59 boundaries for the proposed unit district. Dist. 214's Forest View High School, 2121 S. Goebbert Rd., Arlington Heights, and Elk Grove High School, 500 Elk Grove Blvd., Elk Grove Village, are within the unit district boundaries.

Instead of worrying about building schools, the unit district may need to consider closing some, Schmid said. "Whether you're talking Dist. 59 as a dual or unit district there are decisions that will have to be made down the road," he said.

"Your decision will depend on how badly you wish to maintain facilities in line with a neighborhood school concept," Schmid said.

Elementary and junior high schools in Dist. 59 presently are under capacity, Schmid said. Kindergarten enrollment is currently 291 students below capacity; elementary grades are 743 below capacity and junior highs are 4 under capacity. By 1980-81 kindergarten will be 487 students under capacity, elementary 1,594 under and junior highs 862 under. The figures are based on district-wide capacity with individual schools varying above and below enrollment figures they are expected to accommodate.

The two high schools would be about 250 students over capacity if a unit district were formed by the 1977-78 school year, Schmid said. Both schools were built to house 2,500 students and Dist. 59 is projected to have 5,241 high school age students by 1977. Enrollment will drop however in the following years, he said.

Reductions of $900,000, 43 staffers seen

Dist. 25 faces drastic cuts, tax hike vote

N. Arlington Heights Road, will be necessary in the near future.

According to the plan under study, North School students living west of Arlington Heights Road would attend Ridge School; those living east of Arlington Heights Road and south of Euclid Avenue would attend Windsor School; and those east of Arlington Heights Road and north of Euclid would attend Olive School.

Students from Wedgewood Terrace would attend Kensington School. Most students would be able to walk to school.

The committee asked the administration to study a staffing plan for each of the schools to determine what effect the closing of North would have on the average class size. If North is closed this fall, the average class size in the receiving schools could go as high as 30 students.

IF NORTH IS closed in the autumn of 1977 the size of classes would be lower as enrollment declines. The board expects to make a decision on the closing by March.

The administration also will study the feasibility of leasing or selling the school. Supt. Donald Strong said preliminary appraisals of the site, now zoned residential, show it is an "extremely valuable piece of property."

Closing North School would save the district about $95,000 per year, not including the income it would receive from lease or sale of the property.

The committee also informally agreed on the reduction of 43 classroom teachers next year at a savings of roughly $420,000. There are now about 470 teachers in the district. The reduction in staff would increase the average class size in the district from 25 students to about 27 students.

THE COMMITTEE also reached a consensus on:

- A cut of $142,000 in supplies, services, travel and instructional support funds.
- A $98,000 reduction in staff and programs, including a 50-per-cent reduction in pupil personnel or the assistant principal staff, a 25 per cent reduction in family counseling services, the reduction of one of three staff members in the gifted program, the reduction of one of four psychologists, and a reduction in consultant services or staff for the district's teacher center.
- A $115,000 reduction in instructional support staff eliminating 10.5 of the 29 positions. These positions include learning center staff and librarians.

THE $520,000 BUDGET deficit projected for next year does not include inflation or increases for teacher salaries. Taking these two factors into account, the district could still have a deficit next year and will have to sell tax anticipation warrants, borrowing money against the next year's taxes.

The district is now borrowing through warrants at a level of 27 per cent of next year's taxes. If the budget cuts are made, the district would still have to increae its warrant position to between 40.5 per cent and 49.5 per cent.

Because these budget cuts would not solve the district's future financial deficits, board members agreed a referendum to increase taxes may be necessary this spring. The district can increase taxes a maximum of 52 cents per $100 in assessed valuation of property in the district.

If the referendum succeeds, the district could gain about $1.1 million in revenue per year, but the additional funds would not be available to the district for another year and a half.

IF THE REFERENDUM fails, board members said they would have to go back to the budget and consider more drastic cuts, such as the reduction of an additional 25 teachers, the transfer of sixth graders from junior highs to elementary schools, and program cuts, including the elimination of band, gifted, and athletic programs and a reduction in consultants, instructional support staff and speech therapists.

But board members said school closings should not be tied to a tax referendum. Whether a referendum passes or fails, schools may have to be closed in the future as enrollment continues to decline.

The board met Thursday as a committee-of-the-whole and could not legally take formal action on budget cuts or a referendum. The board plans to meet again as a committee-of-the-whole March 1 to discuss these items and will consider formal action at its regular board meeting March 11.

Walker welfare reform rapped

Gov. Daniel Walker's new attempt to take 6,000 ineligible Cook County welfare recipients off the rolls is "too little, too late," Republican gubernatorial candidate James Thompson said Thursday.

The plan, unveiled earlier this week by aides in the State Dept. of Public Aid, calls for re-registration of all Cook County general assistance recipients. Public Aid Director James Trainor said he hopes the plan will save $8 million during the rest of this fiscal year.

"That's fine," Thompson said during a speech at a Lincoln Day luncheon.

"But governor, it's too little, too late. Where have you been for three years as the department continued to misapply our tax dollars?

"Like many things in this administration, we have had three years of talk and drift and only as we come within five weeks of a primary that may determine the governor's political future do we see the first stirrings of action to correct the talk and the drift," Thompson said.

Bird ills in Massac County

Some Massac County residents have appealed to a congressman for relief from odor and possible health problems resulting from an estimated five million blackbirds roosting in an old 20-acre Christmas tree farm near Metropolis.

Rep. Paul Simon, acting on appeals from Massac County residents and other blackbird roosting spots in Southern Illinois, said Wednesday he had contacted the U.S. Dept. of the Interior to see what can be done about breaking up the bird concentrations.

David Gragg, agricultural extension agent for Massac County, says the birds began coming into the former Christmas tree farm last fall and winter, many of them from Kentucky where spraying efforts continue.

SIU delays bargaining vote

The Southern Illinois University Board of Trustees Thursday voted to delay a decison on collective bargaining elections for faculty members on the Carbondale and Edwardsville campuses.

On a 5-1 vote, the trustees approved a resolution postponing any collective bargaining elections pending the adoption of state statutes on collective bargaining.

The resolution, submitted by board member William R. Norwood of Elk Grove Village, also provides that the board hold public hearings to permit the university community to present information to the board on collective bargaining.

The only vote against the resolution was by trustee Margaret Blackshere, an elementary school teacher at Madison where teachers have bargaining rights. She said she could not support any board action that would not give the SIU faculty the same rights she has as a teacher.

Fund for car-train victims

Sixteen residents of Beckemeyer, Ill., have established the "Beckemeyer Train-Camper Diaster Fund" for the 16 persons killed or injured in the Saturday night crash.

Gary Wuebbles, spokesman for the group, said the purpose of the fund, to be divided 16 ways, would be to help pay expenses of persons involved in the crash.

Henry Lowe, 60, was driving 15 children to a roller skating party when his camper truck was hit at an unprotected crossing by a Baltimore & Ohio freight train. Lowe and six of his grandchildren were among the 12 victims. Four children were injured.

Editor named in Galesburg

Robert Harrison was named editor of the Galesburg Register-Mail Thursday. Publisher Frack Puckett Jr. announced that Harrison replaced Mike Johnson, who resigned.

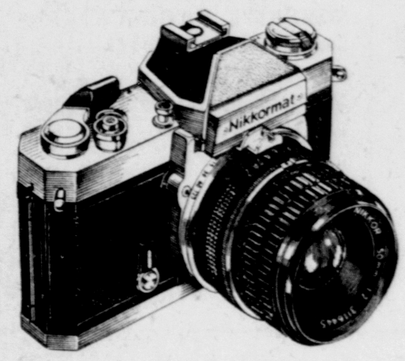

Harrison, 35, worked with the Ames Iowa Daily Tribune, and was the Ames correspondent of the Des Moines Register before coming to Galesburg 12 years ago.

ICC OKs natural gas hike

The Illinois Commerce Commission has granted the Illinois Power Co. of Southern Illinois permission to raise gas rates for some of its customers by as much as $34.92 a year and to cut rates for others by up to $24.22 annually.

Figures released earlier by the ICC indicated the maximum annual increase under the new order would be $11.64. An ICC spokesman indicated Thursday, however, that amount is only the first of three steps that will put the total increase into effect in March 1977.

The way we see it

Choose carefully in school vote

Schaumburg Township Dist. 54 residents should vote selectively Saturday on three proposals critical to the district's financial health.

The three issues on the ballot are:

• Approval of $350,000 in construction bonds for an administrative center;

• Increasing the operations, building and maintenance tax rate from 37.5 cents per $100 of assessed valuation to 55 cents;

• Increasing the education fund tax rate from $1.61 per $100 to $1.91.

We urge residents to vote "yes" on the first two issues and "no" on the proposal to increase the education fund tax rate.

Each proposal should be considered on its own merits:

• In 1974 voters approved $700,000 for the construction of an administrative center. Since then, inflation in the building trades has skyrocketed. A total of $350,000 more is now needed to build the same facility.

The original $700,000 can be used only for an administrative center. It is foolish to not use this money, simply because additional funds are needed to start construction.

Presently, administrative officers are housed in mobile units or scattered in other buildings. Dist. 54, the largest elementary district in the state with 29 schools, needs a permanent administration center in order for these employes to operate at full effectiveness.

• Inflation has also depleted the operations, building and maintenance fund which pays for maintenance, heating and lighting and building improvements.

An increase in this fund was last approved in 1968. Since then, some costs have increased nearly 400 per cent, and the district has had to transfer nearly $200,000 from the education fund to keep it solvent this year.

There is little the district can do by itself to combat these ever-increasing costs.

• The district is asking for a 30 cent increase in the education fund tax rate. It projects a deficit in that fund by the 1977-78 school year if taxes remain the same.

The district is premature in asking for a rate increase, not only because the deficit is nearly two years away but because it does not have an accurate idea of how large the deficit will be.

Detailed tables have been made available on the deficit, using estimated salary increases, assessed valuation increases and state aid funding. But by fall, salary negotiations should be completed, the legislature should have acted on next year's state aid allotment, and assessment trends should be clearer — and that's when a referendum should be held.

In addition, we believe the district has failed to explain to the community the impact if the referendum is defeated. Despite numerous questions, officials have refused to talk about what budget cuts can be made or what programs will suffer. This information is necessary before a "yes" vote can be cast.

Dist. 54 should resubmit the education tax rate hike to the voters when more data is available. A rate increase may be inevitable, but before voters approve it, they should have all of the facts available to make a wise decision.

Betty Ford's sensible in abortion dispute

If candor and realism were the only qualifications needed to be a good President, we'd quickly nominate Betty Ford.

One day recently, her husband, who is fighting for the Republican presidential nomination, tried to take a "moderate" position on abortion. He said he opposes it, except under certain circumstances, and he favors a constitutional amendment giving the states responsibility for deciding whether to legalize it.

Abortion is one of those emotional either-or issues, and the President ended up pleasing no one.

The First Lady issued a dissenting opinion, and in taking on her husband sounded a refreshing note. She said she supports the Supreme Court's decision which legalized abortions. She said the procedure "has taken (abortion) out of the back alleys and put it into hospitals where it belongs."

She's right; the effect of her husband's proposal would be to put abortions back into the back alley, especially for poorer women who lack the money to travel to a state where abortion might be legal.

In taking a clear stand, she showed the kind of courage that her countrymen have come to expect from Betty Ford.

I'll help you with these but I don't need the umbrella now!

French statesman Maurice Talleyrand was born Feb. 13, 1754.

• In 1635, the oldest public institution in America — the Boston Latin School — was founded.

• In 1914, the American Society of Composers, Authors and Publishers was formed.

• In 1974, exiled Russian writer Alexander Solzhenitsyn arrived in West Germany with only the clothes on his back.

• In 1975, the White House announced that President Ford would name Carla Anderson Hills as Secretary of Housing and Urban Development.

A thought for the day: French statesman Maurice Talleyrand said, "Women sometimes forgive a man who forces the opportunity, but never a man who misses one."

'Tierney needs your help again'

"I know a young girl named Tierney. She is 10 years old, she has big brown eyes and shining black hair. She is just about as smart as most girls her age. But she has never walked, she has never talked, and she is just now learning to crawl, grasp objects, to communicate with her parents and her friends."

Last September, The Herald published my letter about Tierney which began this way. Tierney is brain-damaged, her motor functions impaired since birth. She can think and hear normally, but cannot move normally or communicate her thoughts. Volunteers were needed to continue a program of exercise therapy prescribed by the Doman-Delacato Institute in Philadelphia. In the following weeks I got over 50 calls from people — housewives, teens and businessmen, willing to share their time, muscles and love with Tierney.

In January, a trip to the Institute confirmed that Tierney is making progress. She achieved the goal of standing under an overhead ladder for one minute. Her chest and breathing capacity increased by 2½ inches, an increase of more than 300 per cent. Her grasp has become more directed so she can now begin working on picking up objects with her thunb and forefinger. She is now walking with assistance under an overhead ladder and her brain is being stimulated and her body straightened and strengthened by swinging and spinning upsidedown in a device attached to the ceiling.

For this, all our volunteers are responsible (and The Herald for publishing our letter), and no thanks are adequate short of their joy in sharing Tierney's small triumphs over her condition.

But over the months some helpers have had to drop out, leaving gaps in our schedule of therapy (seven days a week, 8:30 a.m. to 12:30 p.m. and 2 to 6 p.m.). If you can spend one hour a week helping on a regular basis, you would be adding to Tierney's hopes for a more normal life and enriching your own life by giving of yourself.

Please call me (392-6229) for more information. Thank you.

Unlikely hero

Adlai lost twice, yet he's posterity's winner

by IRA BERKOW

The nation is being doubly pumped up with hoopla and hot air because this is the Bicentennial as well as, coincidentally, a presidential election year. It may be a useful pinprick to recall now that one of our most distinguished statesmen was also one of our most notable "losers."

Adlai Ewing Stevenson II was the Democratic nominee for president in 1952 and 1956. Both times, he was overwhelmingly defeated by Dwight Eisenhower.

In a nation that has adored the winner and scorned the other, and is accustomed to an often cynical accepting of those who do anything and say anything to win, it is tempering to remember Stevenson.

He was considered by detractors "an egghead." But he never patronized the electorate: unwilling to make broad promises when running for the presidency, he said straight-out, "There are no gains without pains." He refused to pander to pressure groups. He told the South he would seek strong civil rights legislation. He told union members that, contrary to their opinion, he believed the Taft-Hartley Act was not "a slave labor law." To veterans, he said that they owed the nation more than the nation owed them.

STEVENSON WAS seemingly the closest this country has come to Plato's ideal of the "philosopher-king." That is, the man who was truly humble in his awareness of the awesome responsibility of national leadership.

Jacob Arvey, former Illinois Democratic national committeeman who is credited with bringing Stevenson into politics, recalled Stevenson recently.

"He was a lawyer and a former undersecretary of the Navy, yet still relatively unknown in 1947," said Arvey. "But several people told me how brilliant he was.

"We were looking for new blood in politics in Illinois and so I met Stevenson at a lunch that I arranged. I was very impressed. I asked if he would like to run for governor of the state. He said, 'You must be kidding. Oh, I wouldn't run for governor under any circumstances. I have no administrative experience.' The more he said he didn't want it, the more anxious I was to have him."

STEVENSON RAN for governor in 1948, and won. When Arvey later suggested drafting him for president in 1952, Stevenson demurred again.

"Stevenson really couldn't imagine himself in the shoes of Washington, Lincoln, Roosevelt, Truman . . . and when a big dinner was held in New York and the big New York politicians wanted to meet him as a prospective presidential candidate, he didn't want to go. I had to prevail upon him," said Arvey.

It was at that dinner that Stevenson won over many with his wit. He addressed himself to the rumors that he, a divorced man, and Eleanor Roosevelt were having an affair. He said, "There is a romance between us, but it's on my part. I admire her, I respect her, I revere her. If she would even think of me as worthy of her, I would feel honored."

Stevenson entered the presidential race a tremendous underdog to the war-hero Ike. He did so for the same reason he once told a gathering why he had decided to run for governor.

"For a man to enter public life," he said, "was not an honor. It was an obligation. It was a duty. Just like a man being called to serve in the army." He added, "and I don't know if I have the attributes."

TRUMAN, FOR ONE, did not think so. He called Stevenson "indecisive." Others picked up that cry, and Stevenson was known as "the Hamlet of American politics."

And some saw his famous symbol — the hole in the shoe — as not so much of the man-of-the-people but of the absent-minded professor. His rumpled look was indeed the man. Arvey remembers the first time he took a trip with him. Stevenson showed up with an old suitcase that was "bursting and bound up with string."

When I was in the Army I noticed him sitting alone at O'Hare Airport waiting to board a plane.

ADLAI E. STEVENSON II

It was 1962. He was reading a newspaper. He wore a battered gray hat, a creased tan raincoat and brown cracked shoes. His legs were crossed. I looked closer to see if he had a hole in his shoe. He did not. But — I raise my right hand — he had a hole in his sock at the ankle.

He was U.S. Ambassador to the United Nations then. He died from a heart attack three years later, at 65.

John Steinbeck wrote of him in 1953: "I remember no instance in the history of our nation or of any other nation where a defeated candidate emerged with his followers doubly dedicated to him. The exact opposite has usually been true.

"I THINK THAT politics — the word, the practice — had become disreputable to the point where politics and crime were confused in many minds. The career of a politician was for the greedy, the unscrupulous. Having a brother in politics was quite like having a sister in a brothel. Then, in a few short months, (Stevenson), an unknown to the great body of people, changed that picture. (He) made it seem possible for politics to be as it once had been, an honorable, virtuous and creative business."

Nothing so distinguished Stevenson as his reaction to his presidential defeats. After the first, he said, "I feel like the little boy who had stubbed his toe in the dark . . . he was too old to cry but it hurt too much to laugh."

After his loss in 1956, Stevenson said to his followers in his concession speech:

"Be of good cheer and remember, my dear friends, what a wise man said — 'A merry heart doeth good like a medicine, but a broken spirit dryeth the bones.' "

98 years of Valentines remembered

Mike Klein's people

Harriet Bobzine wasn't all that excited about Mark Jenkins' affections the first time they crossed paths.

That was back in Fort Dodge, Iowa.

Harriet took lunches to her father. Fred Bobzine hauled sand, gravel and stone for builders. His wife, Mary, wanted her husband well fed.

So Mary dispatched their little daughter, Harriet, off to the work site with fine lunches.

Harriet always ran up near her father. There was this boy there, too. It was Mark Jenkins. But Harriet did not know that.

"He would say, 'That's right, little girl. You can carry my lunch. You just put it here and I'll be along,' " Harriet remembered as if it happened yesterday noon.

"HE TEASED ME! I didn't think much of him."

Some years passed. Harriet became a young lady and Mark grew into a young man. But she did not know him.

Harriet had a boyfriend for a while when they were both 16. Daniel Tennant lived right close, just a couple streets over from the Bobzine's home near 16th Avenue.

But that romance soured one day. Daniel's friend had been making eyes at twin sisters in Fort Dodge. And he talked Daniel into leaving Harriet for one of those twins.

So for a few months, Harriet didn't have a boyfriend.

THEN ONE DAY, she came across Mark Jenkins again. Only, she didn't know it was Mark Jenkins, just a nice young man. But Harriet figures he remembered her.

"We were skating on the Des Moines River," Harriet recalled, and you could tell this is a fond memory. "He was a wonderful skater. I'm just ordinary.

"Well, I broke a strap on my skate. And I was going home, but he came over and fixed it.

"For the next year, I'd see him downtown in Fort Dodge," Harriet said. "We'd wave and speak. I thought his name was Martin. Everyone always seemed to be saying, 'Hi, Martin.'

"But it wasn't. He was Mark."

WINTER DIED, spring slid past and then it had become summer.

Pretty soon, Mark Jenkins was stopping by Fred and Mary Bobzine's home, paying his respects to their daughter.

Well, Harriet liked him just fine now. It wasn't very many dates before they were real steadies.

It lasted that way just three months. One day, Mark Jenkins up and married Harriet Bobzine.

"We went to the Justice of the Peace, got married, didn't tell anybody," Harriet said. "Then we went home. My mother liked him real well."

Mark Jenkins married Harriet Bobzine ("They called me Bobby") with $4 in his pocket. And it cost half their worldly wealth for the marriage ceremony.

BUT WHO CARES when you're in love!

And what better way to spend Sept. 4, 1895, than marrying Mark Jenkins in Fort Dodge, Iowa?

More than seven decades . . . that's how long it's been. Mark died on Jan. 10, 1957, a most difficult time for the lady from Fort Dodge, Iowa.

You can imagine that Harriet will think about Mark this Valentine's Day. It's her birthday Saturday. She'll be 98 years old.

Harriet sat waiting in the front of her daughter Doris Golterman's home when I came visiting Wednesday afternoon in Palatine.

SHE IS SHARP. Not sharp for almost 98. Literally sharp. Not much gets past Harriet Bobzine Jenkins.

Harriet complained the years are starting to chip away at her memory. Her doctor prescribed tranquilizers once for better sleep. But she heard they affect your memory.

So Harriet quit those little pills. "I'd rather not sleep," she said.

There has been so much happen in this world during the last 98 years . . . world wars and polio vaccines and men on the moon. Your life was always changing.

"I've lived in the years everything was invented," Harriet said. She rattled off sewing machines, telephones, cars, electric lights and gas heat.

"ALL THAT WAS invented in my lifetime." Harriet thinks telephones were the best. They brought Mark Jenkins closer.

Rutherford B. Hayes lived in the White House when Mary Bobzine gave birth to a daughter, Harriet. White and black Americans in soldier blues were still chasing red Americans who had watched their prairies vanish.

But not around Fort Dodge, Iowa. She remembers that it was a nice place where people seemed to get along. Town folks and Indians.

"We weren't afraid of the Indians," Harriet said. "They never bothered people, except to beg. Nobody carried any pistols or guns.

"See, I don't remember too much. I was a baby. But I do know they'd come and point at the line and beg for my baby clothes. My mother told me that."

HARRIET HAS visited Iowa, Illinois, and Wisconsin. It never seemed important to go further. She's seen just one big city, Chicago, and can't imagine bothering to see others.

She always liked car rides and train trips, has said to heck with airplanes and absolutely hates hospitals. Harriet said she's never been sick, outside of cataract problems.

"I'm healthy now," she insisted.

Everyone calls her "Grandma." And how appropriate! Two children had six grandchildren who had 16 greats. And now there are 11 great, greats.

HARRIET JENKINS

You cannot keep Harriet down. There's a Sweetheart Ball at the Palatine Masonic Lodge Saturday night, a big family dinner Sunday and she's baking pies for a celebration next week to honor George Washington.

"I can't sit still," Harriet said.

Wwhen you've lived 98 years, there's lots of time for thinking. She wonders now about this country's future and whether we need some different men in government.

SHE'S ASTOUNDED at how dangerous the world has become. Back in Fort Dodge, Iowa, you never locked doors because people wouldn't steal you blind. They didn't think like that.

Harriet figures she's been lucky. She remembers thinking, "I've got about 15 years left." Herbert Hoover lived in the White House then.

She doesn't care about getting older, Just living. There's a difference.

"I don't want to be an invalid," Harriet said. "I don't want to be no trouble. When I have to be waited on, I don't want to be here."

Harriet is healthy. She figures to make 100. Others in the family have done it before. She might spend that evening like many others, watching Johnny Carson.

And she'll probably think about Mark Jenkins, too.

Bottle bill attributes explained

The environment

by LEA TONKIN

Energy savings, litter cleanup and more jobs can be expected if a bill banning nonreturnable bottles is passed by the Illinois General Assembly, said environmentalist Barry Commoner.

Speaking at a press conference in Springfield, Commoner said breweries and soft drink manufacturers have centralized operations. Commoner is director of the Center for the Biology of Natural Systems at Washington University.

The "bottle bill" supported by Commoner is HB 1838, and sponsored by State Rep. Daniel Pierce, D-Highland Park. Pierce is chairman of the House Environment, Energy and Natural Resources Committee which met the same day to consider the bill.

Commoner said the bottle bill would "do more than just reducing litter and energy use, it will encourage industries to move to the small scale production of bottling." Federal bottle legislation would cost 82,000 jobs and create another 95,000 to 200,000 jobs, he said. Commoner recommends a phase-in period of several years.

Bruce Hannon of the Center for Advanced Studies at the University of Illinois testified that consumer savings in Illinois from the bottle bill can reach $100 million. Opponents of the bill presented views to the committee.

Democracy shoved aside at Dist. 62 Caucus meet

Education today

by Dorothy Oliver

Pam Bigford is the newest reporter on The Herald education desk. She was hired in September and set about tackling the intricacies of covering education — finances, teachers' unions, budgets, deficits, legislation and the operation of school boards.

Within her first few months on staff, she was hit with multimillion dollar construction projects in Schaumburg Township Dist. 54, a teachers' strike, the month-long battle in the Illinois General Assembly on funding special education, school board squabbling and a major tax rate increase referendum.

After Pam covered her first school board caucus meeting this week, I asked her to take over this column space and share her impressions.

Her remarks brought me back to the first time I'd seen a caucus in action. For those who have never been to a caucus deliberation, it may add some insights.

—Dorothy Oliver

I guess I was naive.

I had expected the system to work.

I was excited when assigned to cover the Des Plaines Dist. 62 school board caucus. I had visions of democracy at work — representatives of the people who they had determined were top-notch candidates for the school board.

I pictured the caucus questioning the candidates on school issues. I saw the candidates nervously answering. I anticipated the caucus analyzing the candidates' qualities, and finally saying, these are the ones we think will make the best board members.

AND I DIDN'T overexpect, either. I knew it wasn't going to be Ronald Reagan meeting the press or facing the nation. But I did expect more than I got.

Because I got nothing.

And the worst part is that the citizens of Des Plaines didn't get anything either, and they're the ones who were counting on this caucus.

I don't know what factors were being considered in endorsing candidates Monday night, but the candidates' views on education weren't among them. The caucus didn't hear any such views. And the delegates didn't ask for them.

I thought the caucus was probably endorsing on the nicest smile. One delegate said it was probably on the best speaking ability.

THE ONLY CANDIDATE out of the four who had anything to say was the incumbent Robert Birchfield, who spoke on declining enrollment and rising costs. He was endorsed immediately.

The other three candidates said they had kids in school and wanted to serve the community. It was obvious they expected to answer questions. But the delegates were silent.

After the first vote was taken, I was beginning to wonder if the whole thing was fixed, Linda Roraff, delegate from Orchard Place School, snatched up my idealism as it was slipping down the drain.

"We just voted," she said, "and we didn't hear any candidates' views on schools."

Confusion reigned as other delegates cried out they were new to the caucus and hadn't known what to do. More than half the delegates were new. They said they had expected some information on school issues, or some questions if that information was not in the candidates' speeches.

THEY HAD KNOWN something was wrong, but they hadn't known what.

Should we bring the candidates back, the chairman asked. Should we ask them about education?

Yes, said a third of the delegates, including those from the teachers union. No, said the rest, we've already voted. Besides, they said, those candidates were so nervous. They'd die if we brought them back.

And the delegates voted again, four more times because nobody knew anything about the three candidates, so they kept switching their votes to come up with a majority for one of them. Any of them.

Finally, James Kosmond was endorsed. But it may as well have been Steve Bonaguidi or Guy Burns. They were all the same to the delegates.

SOME DELEGATES came to me as I was trying to write a news story about this caucus and said, "I hope you say how upset some of the members were about what happened here tonight."

There are many people who should be upset about that caucus. Somewhere in Des Plaines there are people who care about who spends the millions of dollars in the Dist. 62 budget, who care who makes the decisions to close schools, proposed tax referendums and provide education.

Some of those people were sitting in that caucus Monday night. Their actions were too late for the April election. But they did manage to form a committee to see if they couldn't do a better job next year.

I hope Birchfield and Kosmond are not only nice guys, but are also good school board members. Because they're going to win. In Des Plaines, the caucus-endorsed candidates always do.

'Hit man' visits Howlett home

"A known hit man" was one of two men who tried to gain entrance to the high-rise apartment of Sec. of State Michael Howlett this week, police said Thursday.

As a result, police placed an around-the-clock guard on the building and stepped up attempts to find the man, a suspect in a South Side murder.

Police said two men went to a cleaning service inside Howlett's apartment house Monday. They told clerks they were from Howlett's office and were to pick up laundry to deliver to his apartment.

The men left after the clerks became suspicious. When the clerks checked with Howlett's apartment, they found no one had been sent to pick up the laundry.

Police were called and they set up a 24-hour guard of Howlett's apartment house.

The description of one of the two men matched that of a suspect in the shooting death of a woman on a South Side street Feb. 1. Police Superintendent James Rochford called the suspect "a known hit man."

Howlett was reported shaken by the incident but kept up his campaign for the Democratic nomination for governor.

In remarks prepared for a luncheon speech Thursday to organized labor leader and union members at Plumbers Hall, Howlett accused his primary opponent, Gov. Daniel Walker, of mismangement.

Robbers shoot, kill woman

Police said Tuesday they were searching for a taxi driver who allegedly raped a waitress in the back seat of his cab and then charged her full fare for a ride home.

Police Sgt. John Fitzgerald said the waitress reported she left a Loop restaurant about 2 a.m. Wednesday, rode part way home on an elevated train and then hailed a taxi.

The waitress said the cabbie drove into a vacant lot, pulled a gun, climbed into the back seat and raped her. He then got back into the driver's seat and took her to her home, charging full fare, Fitzgerald said.

Man arrested for aid letter

Chicago pollice said Thursday they have arrested a man who allegedly sent a letter to state Comptroller George Lindberg, threatening to kill white people if he did not receive his welfare check on time.

James O'Grady chief of the criminal investigations unit, identified the man as Wali Yussal Ali, 48, Chicago. He was charged with a misdemeanor and underwent psychiatric tests Thursday.

O'Grady said the letter was sent to Lindberg's Crystal Lake home.

Cab driver sought for rape

A woman customer was shot and killed Thursday by one of two gunmen attempting to rob the Crawford Savings and Loan Assn. in suburban Cicero, the FBI said.

Two sispects were arrested about two blocks from the bank, according to Richard G. Held, special agent in charge of the FBI's Chicago office.

The woman, whose name was not immediately released, was pronounced dead on arrival at MacNeal Memorial Hospital in Berwyn.

Money giveaway in Chicago

On Chicago's South Side there were these kids, passing out money.

They had plenty to get rid of — about $7,000 of it.

Since they didn't know exactly what to do with it, "they were distributing the money like hand bills," policeman James Kostka said.

Norma Kozlarek, 12, Jeffrey Evard 10, and Jeffery's brother, Steve, 8, were on their way home from school Wednesday when they found themselves in the money.

In a restaurant parking lot, they told police later, they found an attache case, stuffed with nothing but money.

Since money is for spending, they did the logical thing and went to a neighborhood department store.

"They just started passing it out to people in the area," Kostka said. "There were numerous people who made out on this deal."

All went swimmingly until one of the Evard boys decided to buy a tie and flashed his wad of bills to a clerk. A department store guard was alerted and called police. The kids got scared and hid most of the money they had left — a bundle.

Police obtained $2,666 from them and believed $4,000 more was stashed somewhere in the store. But the kids couldn't remember where.

Where did it come from?

The restaurant owner didn't know. Nobody reported to police they were missing $7,000.

And if no one shows up within the next 30 days to claim the bonanza, Norma, Jeff and Steve will get the money for keeps.

Abduction by UFO?

A Fargo, N.D., woman, said while under hypnosis that she, her daughter and her daughter's boyfriend were abducted by an alien creature last August and "dissected like frogs," the director of the Center for UFO Studies said Wednesday.

The woman's descriptions of the creature and the interior of the spacecraft was translated in sketches by WLS-TV weatherman John Coleman for a current news series on UFOs being broadcast by the station.

"She claims to have been abducted," Northwestern astronomy professor Dr. J. Allen Hynek said. "I said claims."

Mrs. Sandy Larson, 32, under hypnosis, said she, her daughter Jackie, 15, and Jackie's boyfriend, who didn't want to be identified, were taken aboard a UFO which landed near Fargo last Aug. 26 and were given a complete medical examination, Hynek said.

Hynek was present last month in Fargo when Mrs. Larson was hypnotized and questioned about the incident by Dr. Leo Sprinkle of the University of Wyoming. Coleman was also present and took notes, telling the following story.

Mrs. Larson said the three of them were driving on Interstate 94, 40 miles west of Fargo, when they heard a loud noise and saw "a series of eight to 10 glowing, round objects lined up in the sky, descending toward earth."

Being terribly frightened, Mrs. Larson stopped the car. After the objects disappeared, she drove to a nearby service station and discovered it was an hour later than she thought.

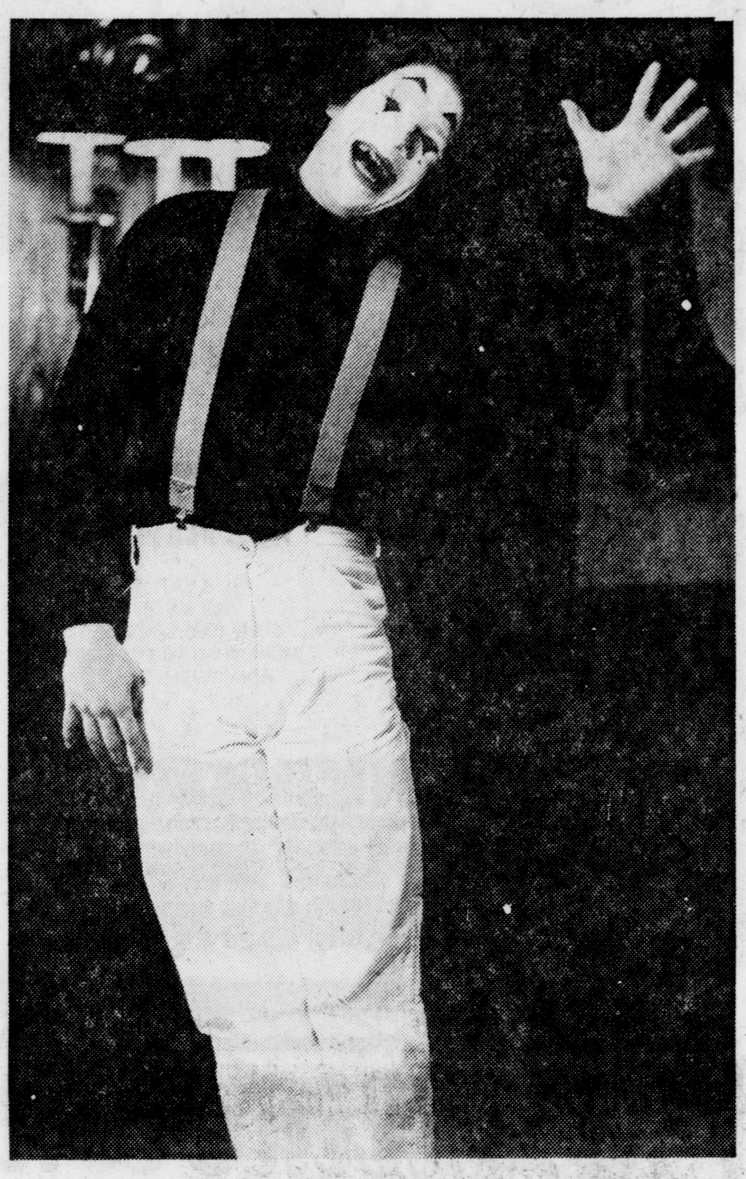

Under hypnosis, Mrs. Larson said a UFO creature "with elastic bandages for a head, or elastic bandages around its head" subjected her and her daughter's boyfriend to "a complete medical exam . . . striped naked and all parts of the body examined . . . even our heads were opened and all parts of our brains were looked at . . . we were dissected like frogs."

"Nothing too much came out of the hypnosis actually," Hynek said. "She — Mrs. Larson — seemed to live through a frightening experience," but the story could not be proven. "The reports, as such, exist."

Out scouting for talent

by GENIE CAMPBELL

Three minutes isn't very long a time — not when a whole summer's worth of song and dance depends upon it, and certainly not when your three minutes is just one of thousands of three minutes being reviewed by talent scouts from Marriott's Great America, a new family amusement park planned for Gurnee, Ill.

But that's all the time contestants auditioning for Great America's 300 performing positions were allowed. Tryouts began in Gurnee the middle of January; continued in Milwaukee, Wis., the following weekend; stopped in Ann Arbor, Mich.; and came last weekend to Chicago where the greatest number of young hopefuls, more than 700, used up their 21,000 minutes' worth.

Singers and dancers were in the majority though a wide variety of performers were represented, including actors, actresses, clowns, ventriloquists, tumblers, jugglers and even several unicyclists.

The new $50 million amusement park is expected to be one of the largest users of young, aspiring entertainers in the Midwest. The park contains five large indoor and outdoor theaters and has need of strolling musicians, cartoon characters and unique variety performers.

"YES, I WAS very pleased with what I saw. Of course I would have liked to give each person more time, but we were still able to get a good idea," said Phil Davis, director of show operations who personally viewed each one of the auditions during the three-day stretch at the Chicago Marriott.

The auditions here drew more people than any other cities visited. This weekend the talent hunt moves to St. Louis and closes in Indianapolis Feb. 22, after which thousands of feet of video tape collected throughout all the auditions will be reviewed before the final list of performers is drawn up.

Most contestants at the Chicago auditions were high school or college students looking for a fun summer job and an opportunity to appear on stage. One high school drama teacher from Racine, Wis., auditioned because she thought it would be the perfect way to spend her summer months off and a great way to keep in practice for class.

Live entertainment will be a big part of the Great America Park scheduled to open May 29. Some of the selected talent will join the Great America Singers, a troupe of 18 singers and dancers who will perform daily in the spacious 1,600-seat Grand Music Hall.

The odds are stiff. A handful out of thousands. But as one Illinois State University coed put it, "I don't even know what they pay. I'm doing my three minutes just for the experience."

Duke: lookin' good, feelin' good and back with a new horse opera

by VERNON SCOTT

John Wayne, a man with a Bicentennial face, wore a weatherbeaten grin as he said, "Checkmate."

The crewman sitting opposite him at the chess board set his king on its side and said, "I resign."

Big old Duke sighed contentedly and stood up to stretch. He was between scenes on the set of "The Shootist" at the Burbank Studios, his first picture in many months.

"Damn," he said in his rumbling voice, "I haven't felt this well in 10 years. Haven't looked as good, either."

HE PATTED his abdomen, which had shrunk by several inches in the past six months.

"I've taken off 15 pounds, and I've got 10 more to go. I'll do it, too. Bet one of my pals $1,000 I could lose 25 pounds before he does."

Wayne wore the clothes that fit him best: western garb. He plays an aging ex-gunfighter, told by a doctor that he's dying of cancer. Wayne was told the same thing more than a decade ago.

"Well, I beat lung cancer," he said, sitting down again. "And I guess my whole system has changed since then. I quit smoking cigarets and took up cigars, but they made my throat tighten up. So I stopped cigars and began chewing tobacco.

"THAT GOT ME all choked up after a while. The doctors made some tests and said after 40 years of smoking my metabolism changed. I've become allergic in all forms. Wish that had happened 30 years ago."

Asked if he was happy to be back in a horse opera again, Wayne nodded. But his face, which looks as if it had been chiseled from Mt. Rushmore, bore traces of doubt.

"I like westerns because I know the field so well," he said. "There are no surprises for me when I work in a western. It's really a different art form from other movies.

"People forget I've done plenty of other pictures. But that's my image. People think of me brawling and roughing it in the West.

"AND I DID grow up on the Mojave desert, riding a horse to school and being around cowboys. So I have a feeling for the West. When I got into pictures, I came to know men like Yakima Canutt and Harry Carey. I worked in some little rodeos, too. It was a delight.

"But the average person doesn't know I went to college and played football. They don't consider me a sensitive man.

"People think I'm boorish and have no taste. They come to my home in Newport Beach expecting to see a bunkhouse with horseshoes hanging all over the place.

"Hell, I've collected art objects from all over the world. But I'm not complaining. That's the way it is."

WAYNE IN TRUTH, is a gentle man. His size, the timbre of his voice and his roles belie the private man. One need only see him with his children or relaxed in his beautifully appointed waterfront home for a glimpse of the inner Wayne.

"For 15 years I had to speak the worst dialogue any actor ever got stuck with," he said. "Helen Hayes once said, 'The test of an actor is his ability to throw away a bad line.' But hell, you can't throw away a whole picture full of bad lines.

"Over the years I've found emotional scenes the easiest to do. It's not the words that count, it's your attitude. So I try to arouse an emotional attitude in people."

A secretary struggled into Wayne's dressing room carrying a large cardboard box jammed with letters. "Today's mail," she announced.

"My God," the giant said, shaking his head. "It just doesn't stop coming in. We try to answer all the letters. It's the least you can do.

"The Shootist," although being filmed at the Burbank Studios, is being produced by Mike Frankovich in association with Dino De Laurentiis for Paramount. Wayne stars with Lauren Bacall. Jimmy Stewart and Richard Boone make cameo appearances.

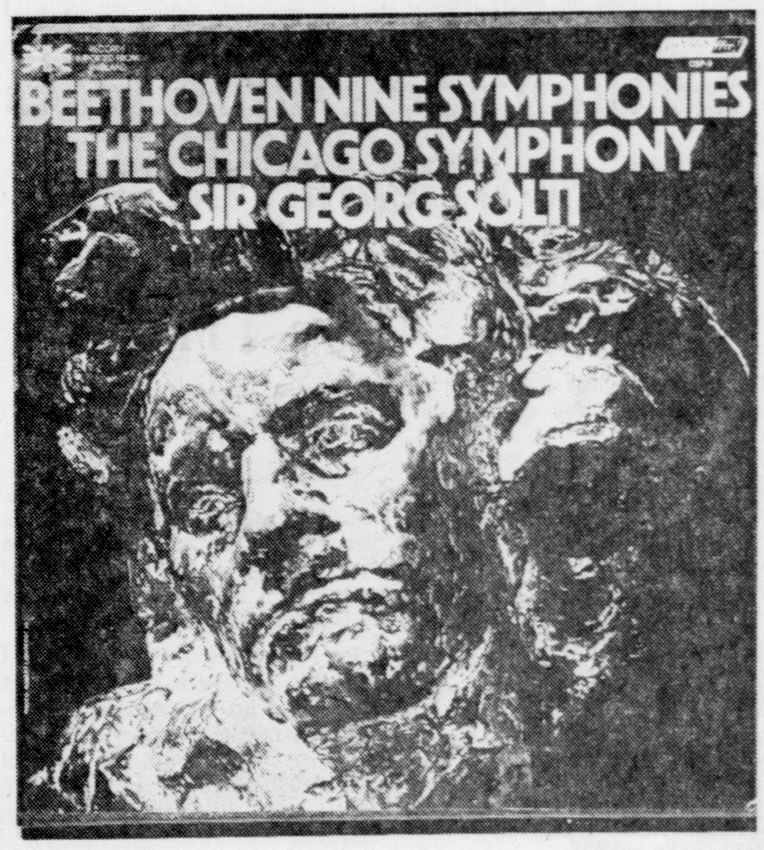

"I like the script and the people I'm working with," he said. "It looks like my next one will be a sequel to 'Rooster Cogburn' with Kate Hepburn, if they can put a script together. I look forward to that."

It was time to return to the set and the Duke was ready. He always is.

(United Press International)

MOVIEGOERS always view John Wayne as "brawling and roughing it." The average person doesn't realize he went to college or that he has collected art objects from all over the world. "They don't consider me a sensitive person," said Wayne.

Since taking control of the Chicago Symphony in 1969, Sir Georg Solti has worked hard to build up and maintain the excellence and reputation of the orchestra.

A 1971 European tour and later expanded American tours helped to publicize that reputation, as did winning a number of awards. In 1972, Solti and the orchestra recorded Beethoven's "Ninth Symphony" for London Records and, while its brilliance was expected, it was nonetheless breathtaking.

The promise was set of what Solti and the symphony would achieve when they completed recording the other eight Beethoven symphonies. The promise has been fulfilled in the London set, released late last year.

THE RECORDINGS are a triumph in every way, imbued with Solti's energy and vision. While striving for a full sound, Solti does not attempt to rewrite Beethoven. He does double the woodwinds in Symphonies 3, 5, 6, 8 and 9 because of the overpowering string and bass writing, but he does not similarly handle Nos. 1, 2 or 4.

"Why should we be ashamed because one bar or so of Beethoven doesn't sound well," Solti says in the libretto. "It is immodest to try to be more clever than Beethoven."

Solti further explains, "Yes, there is a Solti sound, just as there is a sound for every conductor. I have a very clear sound image I am aiming at. I am looking for a very sonorous, very expressive string tone. Expressive string tone, I love it.

"I want the real attributes of a flute, or clarinet or oboe. Maximum expressivo. I want a forte that is noble and a piano that still has body."

THE ROMANTICISM of Solti and the Chicago Symphony comes through especially well on the familiar "Eroica," "Pastoral" and "Fifth" symphonies. Also exceptional is the first movement of "Symphony No. 2."

Three overtures are used as filler. They are the "Egmont," "Leonore No. 3" and "Coriolan," with only the "Coriolan" a new recording.

The complete set is a must for all Solti-Chicago Symphony fans, especially those who helped make the solo "Ninth" (repeated here) a top seller. The set is specially priced at $30.

Album showcases lilting music of Victor Herbert

Playback

by Tom Von Malder

It seems fitting to open this Bicentennial year with a beautiful tribute to the Irish immigrant who helped form the basis for American musical theater.

"The Music of Victor Herbert" (Angel) showcases some of Herbert's best songs in the light romantic vein at which he excelled. Opera star Beverly Sills more than amply sings the words of Herbert's many collaborators. She captures the songs' graceful elegance, as indeed does the London Symphony Orchestra under the guidance of conductor Andre Kostelanetz.

Herbert, who arrived in America in 1886 at age 27, began writing theater scores in 1893. A fluent composer, he soon had written such fine scores as "The Fortune Teller," "Babes In Toyland," "The Red Mill," "Naughty Marietta" and "Mlle. Modiste" (all represented in the album). Before his death in 1924 Herbert also tried to write grand opera, but it was only his light music with which he found success.

BOTH HIS ROMANTIC and comic sides are demonstrated in the album, with "Art Is Calling For Me (I Want to Be A Prima Donna)" the best comic example. Other strong performances are "A Kiss In the Dark," "Ah, Sweet Mystery of Life," "Romany Life" and the two orchestral medleys. Miss Sills' voice is well suited to the operetta form.

Lazar Berman, a 45-year-old Russian pianist, has suddenly come from relative obscurity to take the West by storm. A quick tour, which brought him to Chicago late last month, and five rush-released albums have brought Berman to the West's consciousness fast. Previously, he was only known through rare imported Russian records and occasional performances in Italy.

THE FIRST TWO albums released, both on Columbia/Melodiya, have Berman playing Liszt exclusively. Both albums show Berman to be a skilled technician with a dynamic range. Enthusiasm for the selections does not appear uniform on Berman's part and, in a couple of instances, stronger material could have been selected. Both factors mar otherwise good albums.

On the first album Berman plays a sporadically interesting "Sonata In B Minor" along with entertaining versions of "Mephisto Waltz No. 1" and "Venezia E Napoli" (particularly the Tarantella piece).

Berman does a good job in the second album on the "Twelve Transcendental Etudes," easily going from the "Mazeppa," written for heavy hands, to the delicate gracefulness of "Feux Follets." Also on the album are "Hungarian Rhapsody No. 3" and the ill-chosen "Spanish Rhapsody," which is a lengthy much ado about nothing.

DEUTSCHE GRAMMOPHON plans to release Berman's reading of the Tchaikovsky "Piano Concerto No. 1" and then Prokofiev's "Sonata No. 8" with Rachmaninoff's "Moment Musicaux." A third Columbia album will feature a pair of Beethoven sonatas.

Soundings:

(Tom Von Malder expands his record column beginning today with Soundings, a rundown in capsule form about musicians in the news, new recordings in the works and recommended area concerts.)

"I'm a kamikazi pop star," GEORGE HARRISON said in Cannes, explaining why he became the first of the ex-Beatles to break a 13-year association with EMI (represented by Apple and Capitol records in this country).

BARBRA STREISAND'S first classical album is scheduled for release soon on Columbia. She will sing arias and songs by Faure, Debussy and Handel . . . A B A C H M A N-TURNER OVERDRIVE tour film has been chosen as an entry in this May's cannes Film Festival. The 60-minute film will later be released to television and theaters.

RAY STEVENS has signed with Warner Bros. and an album is due in March . . . RICH WAKEMAN'S new album — possibly a double — will be "No Earthly Connection" and cover such occult favorites as Atlantis, Stonehenge and the Bermuda Triangle.

In the area: DEEP PURPLE Saturday at Northwestern University, Evanston . . . DIONNE WARWICK and ISAAC HAYES for six days starting Wednesday at Mill Run, Niles.

Comedian's biography lacks intimacy of Benney the man

The book stall

"JACK BENNY: AN INTIMATE BIOGRAPHY"
by IRVING A. FEIN
G. P. Putnam's Sons, $8.95

A bad book about Jack Benny? That's impossible, you say — and you're right.

There was so much to Benny's 80 years of life that made us laugh. The characters he created and the laughter he produced on stage, radio and TV have become a permanent part of our national character. Just becoming 39 years old is enough to remember how Benny memorialized that age.

When he died, little over a year ago, there was a sense of national loss that is more normally reserved for the passing of Presidents and poets. We'd lost a man who perhaps qualified as our nation's best comic.

Oh, we still have Hope, Gleason, Carney, Jessel and the rest, but only George Burns — Benny's closest friend and his successor in "The Sunshine Boys" — will reach the comic legend that the 39-year-old violinist from Waukegan named Benny Kubelsky produced.

FOR A MAN AS universally admired as Benny, it's difficult to write a book that could be called incomplete, but Irving A. Fein, his manager, has come very close.

Fein was as close to Benny the comedian as was George Burns; he was as close to Benny the man as was Mary Livingstone, Benny's wife. Fein went to work for Benny in 1947 and quickly became his manager and confidant.

In "Jack Benny: An Intimate Biography" we're overwhelmed with the comedy which Benny produced during his stardom. Easily three-quarters of the book consists of the routines which Benny popularized.

By Fein's account, the path to fame was relatively uncluttered. He has Benny rising through vaudeville, the fledgling days of radio and then TV without the traumas and hardships which often afflict other comedians.

IN FACT, BENNY'S courtship of Mary Livingstone is ludicrous in its simplicity. Just because Benny's comedy was free of mind-boggling complexities doesn't mean his personal life should be written off as a simplistic gag — but that's how Fein treats it.

Missing is any serious attempt to analyze Benny's art.

We deserve more than a look at Benny's humor. We deserve some insights into Benny's role in changing comedy. He was a landmark comedian, but perhaps that was due to his manipulation of old routines, not new comedic paths. If so, our author owes us more intuitiveness, but Fein doesn't deliver.

And how did Benny view the world? We are treated to endless accounts of Benny rolling around on the floor in response to the jokes of others, but nowhere do we gain any insight into just how Benny viewed the world around him.

PERHAPS IT IS too much to expect this from a biography of Benny. After all, the gags and the laughs which Benny produced remain exceedingly funny, and perhaps that's enough. Oh, they don't always read well in cold type, but they do evoke warm memories of Benny's presence.

But Fein's "showbiz" recollection of the master leaves this reviewer flat, with a sense of a large part of Jack Benny still unrevealed. There's a feeling that there was more to Benny than the kind of hysteria produced by Benny, Rochester, Dennis Day, Mel Blanc and the rest of the old gang.

There's an understanding to be reached about just why we enjoyed Benny as much as we did. We get a lot of laughts — but precious little of that kind of understanding in Fein's biography.

More than 40 of LeRoy Neiman's paintings and serigraphs are on display in the Grand Court of Woodfield Shopping Center, Schaumburg, during mall hours through Monday. The artist, who has been on the faculty of the Art Institute of Chicago for 10 years, uses the technique of catching motion and holding it with vibrant color so that each painting captures the impact of the moment, no matter what the setting.

Back to Broadway for 'My Fair Lady'

A revival of "My Fair Lady" will open on Broadway March 25, exactly 20 years and 10 days after the historic first night of the original production. It will star Ian Richardson, George Rose and Robert Coote — recreating his original role as Col. Pickering — and will be produced by Herman Levin, the original producer.

The original production of the Frederick Loewe-Alan Jay Lerner musical ran 2,717 performances on Broadway and grossed more than $20 million on a $400,000 investment. The revival will cost nearly $1 million to mount. (UPI).

'Gable, Lombard' plagued by poor script, directing by DAVIEL DUGAS

(A review)

Maybe Clark Gable and Carole Lombard really had the blistering romance and jolly times attributed to them by Hollywood legend. You wouldn't know it from "Gable and Lombard," a movie so mechanical it seems to have been made by a computer fed with data from old fan magazines.

Not that James Brolin, with a moustache, protruding ears and pipe, doesn't look like Gable — and sound as much like him as Rich Little ever did. But it's more impersonation than performance, as if that is all director Sidney J. Furie had in mind.

As Carole Lombard, the sophisticated star who first rejected Gable and then became his adoring mate, Jill Clayburgh fares no better. Her salty dialogue, the only reason for the movie's R rating, is merely dated and embarrassing.

The resemblance of Brolin and Clayburgh to the originals wouldn't matter if they emerged as believable, sympathetic and interesting characters in their own right. But they never have a chance with Furie's uninspired direction or the Barry Sandler script that has Clayburgh addressing Brolin as "You big ape, lug, dummy" at 10-minute intervals. He lovingly calls her "You skinny dishwater blonde."

THE FILM opens with Gable learning that Lombard probably has died in the crash of a plane bringing her back to Hollywood from a 1942 War Bond tour. Flashbacks then depict their first meeting, their secretive affair because Gable's second wife long denied him a divorce, and their eventual marriage.

There are other historical characters such as Louis B. Mayer, (Allen Garfield), Ivan Cooper (Red Buttons), Hedda Hopper (Alice Backes), and Vivien Leigh (Morgan Brittany), but they are no help in bringing this slow and soggy movie to life, even momentarily.

"Gable and Lombard" is Universal Pictures. It opens later this month in Chicago.

United Press International

RESEMBLANCES aside, James Brolin as Clark Gable and Jill Clayburgh as Carole Lombard do little to bring their characters alive on screen.

Scholastic art on display at Randhurst Wieboldt's

Talented high school students in the area will have the opportunity to receive public recognition for their achievement in art through the Scholastic Magazine's art awards exhibition opening Saturday at Wieboldt's Randhurst store in Mount Prospect.

Ten other Wieboldt stores in the Chicagoland area are also featuring student exhibits, all running through Feb. 28. Chairman of the Randhurst show is Thomas McMahon, art teacher at Forest View High School, and regional chairman is James Pink, who instructs at Rolling Meadows High School.

The best work done in painting, drawing, printmaking, design, three-dimensional art and photography was selected last month by area teachers, t obe reviewed by a panel of judges and put on display.

SIXTY AWARD-winning pieces from throughout the Chicago area will be sent on to New York City for national showing and judging.

Local student finalists are Leana Kozokari and Anthony Manos, both of Arlington High School; Nancy Semple, Lori Bauman and Roland Miller, all of Forest View High School; Sam Leach of Hoffman Estates High School; and Bob Psenka of River Trails Junior High School.

Curator to jury Woodfield show

Ira Licht, curator at the Museum of Contemporary Art in Chicago has been selected as juror by Countryside Art Center for the Woodfield II Art Show to be held April 10 and 11, at Woodfield Shopping Center, Schaumburg.

Licht has been curator since 1974 and prior to that was assistant professor of art history at the University of Rochester in New York

Artists interested in entering the Woodfield II show should send slides of five recent works to Woodfield II, Countryside Art Center, 414 N. Vail, Arlington Heights, Ill. 60004, by Feb. 21.

Italian fare good despite service

Bill o' fare

La Bussola Ristorante is definitely off Schaumburg's beaten path. Tucked away in the back corner of a shopping center at Roselle and Golf roads, it offers a wide selection of Italian specialties served in abundant proportions.

But don't expect to eat and run. While the food is well worth lingering over, the unbelievably poor service makes it impossible to plan more than an evening of dining unless your only objective is to rush home for the 10 p.m. news. We definitely do not recommend La Bussola for a squiggly 6-year-old, even though a salt-water aquarium helped occupy the first 45 minutes.

Featuring:

I started off with a shrimp de jonghe appetizer, $2.50, which arrived steaming hot in a shell. The shrimps were huge, almost scampi size, and nested in a well-herbed sauce that was not overrun with bread crumbs.

My husband's antipasto, $2, was mind-boggling. With spicy salami, delicate proscuitto, thick wedges of creamy blue cheese and icy crisp relishes, it was far too much for all three of us to consume.

THE SOUP THAT followed had a thick peasant-style tomato base with well-textured, rough-cut vegetables. It, too, arrived steaming, accompanied by a large basket of fragrant pizza bread, a mini-version of La Bussolas' "stuffed pizza in the pan." Each "hunk" was a thick, but crusty, morsel topped with a spicy tomato-cheese mixture which complemented the soup and almost proved the undoing of our small fry.

We found the salad somewhat too ordinary for our taste, probably because we prefer the leafy Romaine or bib lettuce to the iceberg variety. My husband said his cream garlic dressing was uncommonly flavorful, but the moppet and I were disappointed in the blandness of the oil-vinegar-herb house dressing.

For the entree, my husband chose Risotti con Fruiti de Mer, $6, a raw rice sauteed in butter, with shrimp, clams, onions and saffron, laced with Madeira wine and baked.

He was impressed with the delicate flavor and amount of seafood but overwhelmed with the bed of rice on which it was served, which we both estimated would amply serve a family of four.

I SELECTED Scaloppine alla Marsala, $7. The thin slices of veal, which had been sauteed with fresh mushrooms and spices, a hint of garlic and marsala wine, were excellent. It was accompanied by a tasty pasta side dish, topped with a thick and meaty tomato gravy.

Our son opted for Mostaccioli Saltati al Sugo, hollow macaroni tossed in the skillet with meat sauce and mushrooms. Cost of the entree is $5, but, while La Bussola does not offer children's portions, a 30 per cent discount is given to all under 12.

Coffee or tea and fresh fruit, the menu says, cap off each meal. However, we had to request the beverages and didn't glimpse a piece of fruit being served to any of the diners.

Red, white and rose wines are offered by the full carafe, $3.75, or half decanter at $2, along with a full wine list and cocktails.

WE CAME AWAY fully satisfied with the excellence of our meals but somewhat agitated that the entire service had taken about two and one-half hours. We also noticed that the families who ordered pizza had spent approximately the same length of time.

Perhaps it is wrong to criticize the service; actually it was fine, but there just wasn't enough of it.

Proprietors Domenico and Nietta Pappada excel in the kitchen, but it is obvious they can't satisfy a full house of 40 patrons with two waitresses.

Stuntman with bravado and a few broken bones

by DICK KLEINER

We were having lunch and suddenly his beeper went off. Beep. Beep. Beep. He excused himself and went to the phone to call his service, as the buper had indicated he should.

A doctor? A lawyer? A private eye? No, this was a Hollywood stuntman.

His name is Hal Needham, and he's at the top of the stunting heap. When he came back, he explained that the beeper had made him thousands of dollars annually. So has the special phone-in-a-briefcase that he takes with him on remote locations.

DEATH-DEFYING feats like jumping a pickup truck over a 128-foot pond keep stuntman Hal Needham in big demand around movieland.

Between the two, he's always available for calls from producers, always ready for action. And, since he's one of the few stuntmen who can do what Evel Knievel does and do it better. That's because they can do it and not get hurt.

"But the public pays to see Knieivel," he says, "because they want to see somebody get hurt. It's the same reason they go to see auto races."

Needham started as a tree-topper after a college athletic career. By the time he became a stuntman, he'd already done most of the things a stuntman has to do.

"I'm never scared," he says, "because I'll never do anything I won't live through. I like to live as much as the next fellow. I don't mind being hurt — I've had more than 40 broken bones, not counting noses and fingers."

HE'S GOING TO be in the next Guinness Book of Records, because he just broke the world's record for a jump with a speedboat — he took one over a 138-foot jump. He didn't break a thing that time, except the record.

(Newspaper Enterprise Assn.)

His success, he says, is due to several factors. Primarily, it's his versatility. Most stuntmen are specialists. They work with horses or cars or do falls or fights or water work. Needham can, and does, do it all.

"Secondly," he says, "I'll try anything that I think I can survive. I've turned down very few things. Once, a nutty director asked me to fall into a pit with a pound of flash powder going off. I knew that much flash powder would roast me, so I declined, with thanks."

Management makes changes in Chicago Ballet program

by LYNN ASINOF

Changes in the management of the Chicago Ballet have led to changes in this season's three remaining programs.

Frederic Franklyn, the company's recently appointed co-director, arrived in mid-January to begin work on a full-length "Coppelia." Latest word is that the full-length production has been scaled down, and only the second act of the fairy-tale ballet will be presented in the upcoming program Feb. 26-29.

Other ballets to be presented this month include Balanchine's "Concerto Barocco" which opened the company's season this fall. A second Balanchine ballet, "The Prodigal Son," presented last year, will round out the program.

Ben Stevenson's "Cinderella," originally scheduled for the March program, was scrapped with Stevenson's controversial departure as artistic director.

INSTEAD, "Intermission at the Movies" choreographed by Stuart Sebastian will be featured March 18-21. Also to be presented in March is Doris Humphrey's "Water Study," considered a landmark piece in the world of modern dance.

The season's last series of performances April 15-19 will feature two ballets new to Chicago. "Con Spirito" is choreographed by James Clouser to music by Smetana, and "Moonscape" is choreographed by Jan Stockman Simonds to music by Michael Horvit.

The April program will include the pas de six from "Napoli" staged by Erik Bruhn. The piece, choreographed by the 19th century August Bournonville, was originally scheduled for presentation earlier in the year.

Evening performances begin at 8 p.m. Thursday through Saturday, with matinees at 3 p.m. Saturdays and Sundays. Tickets are $7 for all but the $5.50 Saturday matinee. All performances are in the small chamber theater at 1016 N. Dearborn Ave., Chicago.

Closets full? – try a want-ad

Impossible to out-guess Pinter

Much of today's theaterfare reminds me of elaborately wrapped packages with meat, fancy bows on top. No matter the actual content. They're pretty to look at.

Other plays are not as easily packaged, like Harold Pinter's "THE BIRTHDAY PARTY" which COUNTRY CLUB SHOWCASE THEATRE chose as the first of a continuing Monday night offering of avant-garde and experimental theater.

The show, directed by KENT MONKEN and spotlighting a cast of Chicago and local community-theater actors, is superb. Monday's small audience, willing to subject themselves to pretty strong stuff, more than got their $2.50 worth.

Most people won't admit to it for fear of exposing a flaw in their intelligence. But I will. I didn't understand "The Birthday Party." Norhave I ever been able to make heads or tails out of Pinter. But that didn't keep me from thoroughly enjoying the production.

I admire Pinter's absurd (and this is theater of the absurd) style and technique. I find him fascinating.

In a nutshell, Pinter's plays are about "people bothering people who want to keep to themselves." To try to offer any more of an explanation would be purely subjective. "The Birthday Party's" symbolism (as in all Pinter plays) is as disputed today as when the piece was written in 1957.

Yes, it's exasperating but downright challenging. And in theater, that's extremely refreshing.

Even if one is uncertain what Pinter is saying, one can't disregard his impact.

The English absurdity takes place in a run-down seaside resort. (The current set could look a bit more dilapidated though Monken was forced to work around the set of "Sleuth" featured at County Club Comedy Theatre Tuesday through Sunday. And after all, that show is footing the bills.)

T. NEWELL KRING plays the withdrawn young man, Stanley, an ex-pianist, though we never know for sure if that's fantasy or fact. We do know he has alienated himself completely from society, taking refuge in the boarding house where he is the only guest. Lean, disheveled, with the look of a hunted man on his face, Kring is Pinter's primary target.

DORIS SILVER, active with Village Theatre, is the best I've seen her. She plays Meg Boles, mistress of the boarding house, who rattles on in meaningless talk. Pinter excels in showing a deliberate evasion of communication as opposed to no communication at all. A dribble of conversation is always going on. But it has little relevancy and, besides, no one listens.

ARNOLD SILVER plays opposite his wife as Petey Boles, a deck-chair attendant who remains oblivious to everything. Petey does have an opportunity to reach out and help Stanley who is in a catatonic stage by the end of the play, but he backs down.

Monken makes it clear that Stanley is fleeing from his past life. What he did, we don't know. It's possible to imagine almost anything. But whatever he did catches up to him.

That past life is represented by PAUL CARY and THEODORE R. HOERL who show up as two uninvited guests. The interrogation scene, when the two attack Stanley on both the most serious and frivolous levels, is extremely well done.

JANET DAVIDSON plays Lulu. She advises Stanley in the beginning to shape up and get out. Stanley says he has nowhere to go. Lulu, always dressed like a whore, represents, I feel, Pinter's total disregard for women.

Night out

by Genie Campbell

Yet, as nightmarish as Pinter can be, and his final scenes of each act in the "Birthday Party" are indeed frightening, the avant-garde playwright gently mocks everybody and everything. It makes me wonder if he isn't putting us all on just a bit.

And that's just what keeps you thinking about this play a little bit longer than most. For Pinter, tragedy is funny.

M&S cast in rehearsal for 'Subject Was Roses'

Masque and Staff, Elk Grove's community theater group, has entered the second half of its rehearsal schedule for Frank Gilroy's drama, "The Subject Was Roses." The play won the Pulitzer Prize for drama in 1965 and was voted best play of that year by the New York drama critics.

The Masque and Staff production will be presented at Dempster Junior High School, Mount Prospect, the evenings of Feb. 27 and 28 and March 5 and 6.

The play concerns a son who went away to war as a pampered boy and comes back as a man of his own and the devastating effect the homecoming has on his father and mother. They all want to love one another — to relive the good old times and build even better ones together — but they find it impossible to communicate with one another. They don't know how to love.

The role of the father is played by Bob Johnson of Elk Grove, a veteran of Masque and Staff. Cast in the role of the mother is Pat Soderlund of Rolling Meadows, and the son is played by Jim Dean, Elk Grove. Director is Shirley Johnson, Elk Grove; producer is Art Hassel, Arlington Heights.

M & S is in its 17th season of community theater, presenting two productions a year for the proscenium stage and one in a dinner-and-play format. This year's dinner play will be the comedy classic, "Harvey," scheduled April 23, 24, 25, 30 and May 1 and 2 at Mr. Duke's Villa di Domenico, Wood Dale.

Tickets for the current play, which begins at 8:30 each evening, may be ordered at 437-0679. Admission price for non-patrons is $3. Students are admitted for half price.

THE DAY THAT COMES IN THE LIFE OF EVERYONE!

It usually happens late at night or early in the morning. At a time of day when you don't look your best anyway, you catch a glimpse of yourself in the mirror . . . and it happens.

What you see looking back at you truly surprises you. For the first time you see the beginnings of "crow's feet" around your eyes. You see the wrinkles around your mouth and on your neck. You look tired . . . long before you ever expected to, you're aging.

Why does your face start to wrinkle so early? Why is it that you can always tell a person's age first by their wrinkles? More importantly, why do some people wrinkle while others hold their youthful good looks well into their forties and fifties?

THE ONAN THEORY

We at Onan Laboratories* have wondered the same thing. We knew that if we found the reason, we might be able to produce one of the most important beauty aids of all time.

Over a three-year period, we interviewed literally hundreds of people about this problem. We particularly concentrated on those people who did not wrinkle even though they were well past 40. We tried to determine what these people had in common . . . what habits they had that might explain their great looks. What we found truly surprised us . . . yet, it's so simple it's a wonder someone hasn't realized it before now.

Doctors will tell you that facial expressions cause wrinkles. The frowns, the smiles, the winks and other expressions contort your face over and over agin. After years of this, wrinkles begin forming. We all have to use facial expressions . . . but some people are able to delay the wrinkling process. Why is this?

Ask yourself this question: What is the only opportunity your face has to be completely at rest and expressionless? When you sleep of course! Now ask yourself this: Did you ever wake up in the morning to find unsightly wrinkles and creases in your face caused by your pillow? Sometimes you can actually see the pattern of your pillowcase embedded in your face! Take a moment right now and hold your pillow up to your face. Now, turn your face against it as you would when you sleep. Can you feel it pulling and contorting your skin? Most of us rob our face of the one daily opportunity we have to revitalize it . . . when we sleep!

NEW PILLOWCASE MOVES WITH YOU

Once we realized this, we did set about developing one of the most dynamic products of all time. Now, for the first time, we're making our discovery — The Onan Friction.Les Pillowcase — available to you.

After testing many fabrics, we have developed a pillow covering which consists of a specially chosen outer fabric and an interior mesh lining . . . this pillowcase actually gives with your facial movements! It is nearly impossible for it to stretch your skin like other pillowcases have up till now! Furthermore, we believe that testing currently going on will show that the continued use of the ONAN Friction. Les.Pillowcase will actually revitalize your facial skin and help erase existing wrinkles.

Although you may receive temporary results from the use of creams or special exercises, we believe that your efforts to protect your face may be totally wasted by the stretching your skin receives while you sleep.

HAIR PROTECTION

Many people have paid high prices for pillowcases made of satin or other material which were designed to protect hairdos. Our tests have shown that the ONAN Friction.Les Pillowcase is many times more protective than any of these products. For the same reasons it won't stretch your face, it will be easy on your hairdo. And you won't experience the heat associated with some of these other pillowcases.

MONEY BACK GUARANTEE

We could go on and on about this new discovery, but we don't expect you to take our word for it. We want you to try this new pillowcase at no risk.

Send today for the ONAN Friction.Les Pillowcase . . . the instant you feel it you'll know you're holding the most unique pillow-covering ever invented. If you don't feel that way, send it back . . . or use it for a full week. If you still don't feel that way, send it back anyway . . . your money will be refunded in full. Don't neglect your face one moment longer . . . send in the easy to use coupon today!

Emphysema isn't the same as TB

Please explain to me what emphysema is and how it affects people. Is it contagious? How is it different from tuberculosis?

Emphysema is not contagious and is not caused by a germ. Tuberculosis is. However, a person can have both tuberculosis and emphysema.

Emphysema means obstruction of the airways in the lungs. The lung is made up of many tiny air sacs that you can regard as small balloons. These air sacs are where oxygen and carbon dioxide and other gases are exchanged with the blood. To provide oxygen and eliminate carbon dioxide the air in the sacs must be changed constantly.

When we breathe out, we expel the air in the tiny sacs and when we breathe in, we bring in new oxygen. In emphysema the neck or opening into the tiny sacs is narrowed or constricted. This makes it particularly more difficut to empty the air sacs of old air adequately.

The constantly over-distended air sacs result in an over-distended chest. A person with longstanding emphysema will have a larger, often barrel-shaped chest because of the over inflation. We call this configuration an emphysematous chest. Normally, the chest is flatter, as you can see by looking at your chest again, assuming you do not have emphysema.

THE INADEQUATE exchange of air leads to poor oxygenation of the body. The degree of difficulty is directly related to how much old air is trapped in the lungs and how much obstruction to air flow into and out of the lungs there actually is.

Various factors contribute to the obstruction at the opening of the air sacs. Cigaret smoking is a major one.

Poor oxygenation leads to loss of energy and one of the first symptoms of emphysema may be loss of exercise capacity. With mild exertion the victim gets short of breath. As the disease progresses, the difficulty in breathing becomes more marked. Finally these people literally choke to death or spend the last of their days literally gasping for air. There are other complications that can occur along the way, too, which are not any more pleasant.

For a better understanding of how the lungs work send 50 cents for The Health Letter, Number 2-4, Keeping Your Lungs Fit. Enclose a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope for mailing. Address your letter to me in care of Paddock Publications, P.O. Box 1551, Radio City Station, New York, N.Y. 10019.

EMPHYSEMA may follow a long history of apparent bronchial trouble with cough and sputum, or any evidence of lung disorder may be entirely absent. Weight loss may be a feature as well as breathlessness and loss of exercise capacity.

Treatment is based on removing any and all irritants to the lungs and first on the list is tobacco. Doctors can help in some cases with other means of cleaning up infections and improving lung function. Some medicines are useful in helping to relax the obstruction in the lungs and improve ventilation. None of these measures by the doctor will be successful unless the patient cooperates by stopping smoking entirely or by avoiding other sources of irritants, such as dust, to which he may be exposed.

Good luggage should be stored properly

Dear Dorothy: I have a blue vinyl-covered train case which is about 15 years old but has never been used. It's been stored in the attic, where the temperature is hot in summer and cold in winter. The case was wrapped loosely in paper. The sides of the bag are very sticky even though I've had the case out in open air for about two months. Is there anything I can do?—Kate Guss

Heat does strange things to vinyl or plastic and probably being wrapped helped compound the situation with your bag. A luggage dealer said you might try washing the outside with soap and water, being careful not to get any water into the case.

While talking about not storing luggage in hot attics, I'll also point out that it should never be stored on a concrete garage floor. The resulting condensation can do considerable damage to the interior of luggage. Good luggage has to be stored properly or it won't be "good" when you need to use it.

Dear Dorothy: Had some leftover hollandaise so refrigerated it. Got ready to use it two days later and put it in the top of the double boiler, adding a tablespoon of water and stirring it some. It started to curdle. Some old advice came to mind. Beat in a tablespoon of cream. No more curdling — and the sauce was fine.—Addie Herzl.

* * *

Dear Dorothy: One of my good plates has a crack. A neighbor says boiling it in milk will eliminate the crack. I'm a bit cautious and wonder if you've heard of this method.—Mildred Pollack

Yes. Tried it. The plate came out in two pieces.

For new homemakers: Garments soaked in bleach should be thoroughly rinsed or ironing will bring forth a scorchy stain.

Tornados cause heavier damage than hurricanes

Andy sends a 20-volume set of the Merit Students Encyclopedia to Ralph Brown, 12, of Peaks Island, Me., for her question:

WHAT IS THE DIFFERENCE BETWEEN A TORNADO AND A HURRICANE?

Hurricanes and tornados are tremendous storms born in our weathery atmosphere, and when they strike we can expect one thing for sure — damage and dreadful destruction. Actually these two fierce storms are quite different, not only in size but in the type of damage they cause.

Weather experts rate the tornado as the world's wildest storm. A hurricane is much bigger, a blinding blizzard is considerably colder, and a drenching cloudburst is wetter. But a tornado is the fiercest. Tornadoes are small local storms that can rip a path of destruction as much as a quarter-mile wide. Though they move along the ground at a speed of 35-40 miles per hour, they generally only last a few minutes — but those few minutes can be catastrophic.

Meteorologists, scientists who study weather, do not fully understand exactly how tornadoes are born, but they do know that colliding air masses are a factor. When fast-moving cold, dry air flows up over moist, tropical air, instead of wedging under it as it usually does, the warm air rushes upward at tremendous speeds. Air flowing in from the sides causes the updrafts to spin.

As the updraft spins wildly, dust and debris are drawn in and a dark funnel appears, hanging down like a great elephant trunk. Whirling winds in the funnel may be spinning at as much as 500 miles per hour, and wherever the tip touches the earth's survace total destruction results.

A hurricane is a much larger storm, sometimes more than 300 miles wide. While the damage in a tornado is caused in a matter of minutes, the hurricane lashes out for two or perhaps three days. During this time, wild winds, torrential rains and flooding cause millions of dollars in damage.

Hurricanes form over the ocean where there is plenty of warm, moist air. As the moist air grows warmer, it begins to rise. Heavier air is swept in and drawn aloft with the light rising air in the center. The motion of the spinning earth causes the rising air to twist. As the global winds move, the young hurricane picks up speed and gains energy. The winds in the outer column of air may be blowing as much as 150 or even 200 miles per hour.

Woman goes West in TV premiere

NEW YORK (UPI) — Can an overbearing young woman from Philadelphia find happiness as a school teacher in the little western town of Independence, Colo.?

Brenda Vaccaro certainly will give it a try as "Sara" beginning Friday night on CBS from 7 to 8 pm.

If the opening episode is any judge, there hasn't been so much sermonizing about the American ethic since Frank Capra sent Mr. Smith to Washington in the 1930s. There's nothing wrong with the ethic, but the preachiness might wear a little thin.

Miss Vaccaro, husky-voiced and frizzy-haired, plays a Philadelphia girl who answers a newspaper advertisement for a school teacher and takes off for Independence, Colorado Territory, in 1870.

THE THREE school board members who picked her, sight unseen, had hoped for someone more docile — one, in fact, also hoped for someone more conventionally attractive.

None of them figured she would demand all sort of improvements — new readers and privies, for instance — and would defy them and the town sentiment by taking into the class a little half-Indian girl, Patricia Ganem, as lovely looking a child as you'll ever hope to see.

Trouble erupts, as the children boycott the one-room schoolhouse, with one boy saying, "I ain't got to stay here with no half breed."

The schoolhouse is burned down, and in the long run classes resume outdoors. The little Indian wins the acceptance of her classmates, if not their parents.

"Sara" starts with what might be a big advantage — it is not a cop drama nor a situation comedy. It offers a wide scope for its writers, from conventional good guy - bad guy confrontations in some episodes to comedy in others and even social comment, as in this one.

Foul up with forced club bid

Win at bridge

by Oswald and Jim Jacoby

Today's hand from the finals of the team trials shows what happens when a forcing-club system fouls up.

South couldn't open one club and was forced to start proceedings with one diamond. North's two-spade rebid was one of those bids described as fourth-suit forcing and poor South did the best he could by going to two notrump.

Now North finally showed real strength by his jump to four clubs and South jumped to six clubs. He had decided that his partner's bidding was meant to show a void of diamonds. North went to six notrump and West opened a spade.

South won and went after hearts. West ducked the first heart lead, but had to win the second one.

Then West entered into some sort of trance. He had a feeling that somehow or other there might be something wrong with his opponents' bidding. Finally, he led a diamond and East cashed three diamond tricks.

DAILY CRYPTOQUOTE – Here's how to work it:

A X Y D L B A A X R is L O N G F E L L O W

One letter simply stands for another. In this sample A is used for the three L's, X for the two O's, etc. Single letters, apostrophes, the length and formation of the words are all hints. Each day the code letters are different.

Blue-chip prices go down in see-saw stocks session

NEW YORK (UPI) — Blue-chip profit taking accelerated Thursday afternoon to drive prices lower in active trading during a see-saw session on the New York Stock Exchange.

Many of the nation's banks and other institutions were closed for the observance of Lincoln's Birthday and this curtailed market activity somewhat, analysts said.

As a result, the Dow Jones industrial average, a 3.15-point gainer Wednesday, lost 5.12 points to 966.78. It had been ahead more than three points in the early afternoon.

Standard & Poor's 500-stock index slipped 0.52 to 100.25, the NYSE common stock index 0.21 to 53.55 and the average price of an NYSE common share by 13 cents.

THE MARKET'S breadth figures reflected some investor uncertainty. Of the 1,899 issues crossing the tape, 748 declined, 746 advanced and 405 remained unchanged.

Turnover totaled 28,610,000 shares, down from the 32,300,000 traded Wednesday.

Observers said the market has been laboring since it registered a record January gain. Profit taking remained a factor and most analysts considered this normal. But most Wall Streeters were optimistic the market's general course was higher.

Some investors have been encouraged that short-term interest rates had declined in recent days. Recent upward moves created uncertainty about the status of the four-month decline in short-term rates.

SEVERAL AIRCRAFT issues lost ground in light of controversy over payments to foreign agents for contracts. General Dynamics lost 2 to 42-3/8. Boeing lost 7/8 to 28 after the Securities & Exchange filed an action in a U.S. District court to force the aircraft company to supply information about any payoffs it had made. Lockheed, a big loser lately, added ¼ to 7.

Ramada Inns led the Big Board actives, gaining 5/8 to 6¼ on 461,100 shares. Holiday Inns, another tourist industry issue, gained 1 to 19¾. Analysts said tourist issues should benefit from bicentennial activities this year.

PAN AMERICAN World Airways was the second most active issue, up ¼ to 6-1/8 on 436,800 shares, including a block of 205,000 shares at 6.

Texaco was the third most active Big Board issue, off ¼ to 25-5/8 on 245,400 shares, including a block of 100,000 shares at 25¾.

Prices closed higher in active trading on the American Stock Exchange. The average price of an Amex share increased by six cents. Volume totaled 3,970,000 shares, compared with 3,850,000 traded Wednesday.

FAVORITE. Buffalo Grove's Mike Yaskey accepts congratulations after a recent win. Yaskey is seeded first in the backstroke in tonight's Mid-Suburban League conference swimming meet at Olympic Pool in Arlington Heights.

Banner weekend in sports; swimmers face league test

by BOB GALLAS
Swimming Editor

Will the kids on the block unite to knock off the bully? Or will Don Andersen end up taking his yearly swim with clothes on?

Those questions and others will be answered tonight at the Mid-Suburban League swimming finals at Olympic Pool in Arlington Heights, starting at 7 p.m.

Coach Don Andersen and his Arlington tankers will again be the favorite as they gun for their fourth MSL title in a row after a string of 29 straight league meet wins.

Under the league's scoring system, which combines regular season performance with conference meet finishes to determine final standings, Elk Grove and Prospect must finish ahead of the Cardinals tonight to produce a three-way tie for first.

For the Cards to miss at least a partial share of the crown, three teams would have to beat the Cards, a feat about as likely as walking across the pool.

Andersen admits his team is shooting for the title above all else and indicated they're not taking their competition lightly.

"If we goof on a relay like we did two years ago, we'd be back in the pack. We just can't afford any mistakes," Andersen said.

"I'd say we need to win the freestyle relay and take first or second in the medley relay because of all the points that go with those events," Andersen went on. "Then if we just maintain our seeding, we'll be very hard to catch."

Arlington's perfect 7-0 conference mark gives the Cards a two-point lead in the standings over Elk Grove and Prospect, both 5-2 in the league.

Arlington will start off the night only one point in the lead, thanks to its divers Glen Seaman and Scott McCratic, whose third and fourth place performances in diving finals Wednesday gave the Cards the head-start. Buffalo Grove's two-six diving finish puts them only a point behind the Cards.

Going by seed times, best times of the year for each swimmer which is used to determine lane placement, Arlington should win the meet with 204 points, with its closest competitior being Prospect with 158 points. But no one is counting on that.

But the seed times do indicate an interesting balance in the league once you get past Arlington.

Only 30 points separate the second team, points wise, from the sixth team. After Prospect's 158 points, comes Buffalo Grove with 146, Elk Grove with 142, a surprising Forest View with 136 and then Wheeling with 128.

Some exciting races are expected in tonight's contest, right from the opening 200-yard medley relay. Only .3 of a second separates top-seeded Arlington from Prospect. Arlington's best time of 1:46.5 narrowly edges out Prospect's best, 1:46.8. Right behind are Elk Grove with a 1:48.250 and Forest View with a 1:48.4.

In the 200-yard freestyle, Hersey's Chris Tague should be an easy winner with 7.1 seconds separating Tague's best time from that of his closest competitor. The battle for second behind Tague should be furious, though.

The 200-yard IM should also be a good race between Forest View's freshman sensation Tom Redig, and Steve Novack of Arlington. Brad

Bowlers battle for state honors

by PAUL LOGAN

Forest View and downstate Abingdon, perennial powers in high school girls' bowling, figure to be among the favorite at the Illinois State Bowling Tournament this weekend at Peoria.

Both former state titlists will be making their fourth straight appearance in the fourth annual tourney. The Herald area's other team — Rolling Meadows — is making its first trip.

Competition begins this morning with the finals scheduled for Saturday at 1 p.m.

The Forest View Falcons, under new head coach Pam Frase, are out to regain the championship they won in 1974. They just missed repeating in 1975, finishing second to a Dixon team that was dominated by boys. Only girls will be competing this time.

Carrying the best district team pin total into the tourney is unheralded Rockford East with 4800. Abingdon is next with 4792 with Forest View in at 4761.

Also figuring to contend for the title will be Evergreen Park (4642), Sterling (4641) and Rolling Meadows (4625).

"I think they're pretty confident," said Frase prior to leaving Thursday. "I'm sure the ones who have already been down there are confident.

"I think that will help in the end. Some of the girls were so nervous in the districts. But as expected, the two that had been to the districts before helped pull the girls through."

The two Falcon veterans are junior Nancy Lachus and sophomore Judy Pleickhardt. Together they give the team five years of state finals experience.

Lachus and teammate Cheryl Hanson turned in district averages of 169.8 each. Lachus had carried a 162 league average (second in the Mid-Suburban) into the tourney with Hanson jumping 20 points over her league total of 149.

Pleickhardt, who topped the MSL bowlers with a 163 average, nearly hit it in the tourney with a 161.3. Falcons Debbie Compton improved upon her season average (136) with a 139.3 and Julie Mathews dropped from her normal 159 (tied for third in the league) to a 138 last weekend.

It will be a whole new ball game for Rolling Meadows, but Mustang coach Joan Jensen and her team are anxious to be tested.

"They're very excited," said Jensen. "I'd say that we always have had a good team (over the years), but we just never have risen to the occasion before. We've learned how to take the competition and the pressure and have been pretty consistent this year."

Connie Gallisi, who has bowled for Meadows three years, paced the team with a 167 average last Friday at the Schaumburg District. She was 20 points over her league average.

Pam Ehrens, a four-year veteran, was seven pi s over average with a 156.

The three other Mustang bowlers were just about right on their regular marks — Petrice Costello was one over average with 146 and Paula Ericson and Kim Williams were one pin under average with 144 and 158, respectively.

Williams finished third in the MSL with a 159 average, tying Forest View's Mathews.

"We want to do our very best and hope — like everybody else does —

SUPER SOPH. Forest View's Judy Pleickhardt shows the form that helped her to the highest average (163) in the recently concluded Mid-Suburban League season. Her team will be shooting for its second state title this weekend at Peoria.

One year later... girls bowl against girls in state meet

Before the class system, when the small school still had a chance to play for the state basketball title, there were some very unpopular champions in Illinois ranks.

They were worthy champions but still unpopular.

Fans were enamored with the little guy, the underdog trying to knock over the big bully, but if the big school won, as it did most of the time, the boos would reverberate throughout Huff Gym or the University of Illinois Assembly Hall.

The unpopular champion is a rarity in Illinois high school sports, but there have been a few through the years. Who could forget the bowling nightmare of 1975?

It was exactly one year ago this weekend that they crowned possibly the most unpopular champ in the history of Illinois High School Assn. sports competition.

Dixon High School — a team of four BOYS and one girl — won the girls state bowling championship at Town and Country Lanes in Peoria. When it was all over, Dixon had 9749 pins to 9520 for area favorite Forest View — a team of five GIRLS.

A large crowd packed the lanes to watch the tourney, and it was evident the sympathy of the crowd was not with Dixon.

Even Mary Ellen Taylor, tourney manager from the host Peoria Richwoods High School, was forced to comment: "Girls sports are just getting started well on a competitive footing, and here we are in only our third year of the bowling tournament and we have to put up with this."

A storm of controversy followed. "Our whole team was just sobbing," Forest View coach Diann Tomaino told The Herald. "The people there gave the girls a standing ovation that seemed to last about five minutes. They kept shouting, 'Forest View's No. 1!"

But Forest View was not No. 1 — officially. They were the best all-girls team in Peoria, but that wasn't enough this February weekend in 1975.

"We were getting tired in the finals," said Forest View coach Tomaino after the tournament. "It's hard to bowl six games that fast under this kind of pressure — bowling against boys."

The problem developed when the school board of Dixon ruled against having an all-boys bowling team. Consequently, four boys joined the school's girls team at the start of the season, making it co-educational, and Dixon went on to a very unpopular state championship.

The IHSA has passed by-laws prohibiting boys from competing on girls' teams, but that 1975 tourney still remains a very bitter memory for Forest View High School, a touted entry now in the 1976 finals, and Dixon, which missed qualifying last Saturday — with five girls.

Dale Hohm, a male member of that Dixon championship team, admits it was a difficult time but says, without hesitation, "I'd do it again."

"I think that's the only way we could have done it," he said. "We were trying to force a boys program at Dixon. We knew the interest was there.

"When we started bowling on the girls' team all we wanted was to get a boys program started. They didn't think there was any interest, and they figured it would be less expensive to let boys bowl on girls' teams."

The boys at Dixon High felt the school would add a boys team in the middle of the season, at the latest, but it never happened. Suddenly, they were involved in the state finals and the fuss really began.

Hohm says "it was fun" until the state tournament in Peoria. "We took a lot of ribbing at school, but mostly in fun. Like when they'd announce it over the intercom that the girls' bowling team had done this and high series and high game was by Dale Hohm and Gary Glaser. Everybody got a good laugh."

The laughs ended in Peoria, and Hohm remembers it well. He can understand some of the reaction but still feels people should have tried to understand the whole story.

"When they presented the trophies to the second (Forest View) and third place (Abingdon) teams," he recalled, "everybody applauded but everything was quiet when we got our trophy and first place pins. They didn't hiss or boo; they didn't do anything."

Mona Hohm, Dale's mother who coached the championship team in 1975, remembers the severe pressure on the male members of the team.

"They bowled under pressure no adult would have had, and came back," she said. "That's the mark of a champion. I wasn't worried when we got behind (early against Forest View). They had bowled well all year and that just made them more determined.

"We were very pleased with the results because we got the boys team we were after, but the IHSA still does not recognize boys bowling. They still don't have a state tournament like the girls."

The Dixon boys got what they were after — a boys bowling team at the school — and Dixon still has the state championship trophy, but was it worth all that furor?

A year passes. The boos have subsided, the controversy is just an unpleasant memory as another tournament gets under way, but the people directly associated with this event still feel a little shaken by the entire episode.

When they roll that first ball today in the 1976 finals in Peoria, you can be sure many of the girls will be thinking about one of the most unpleasant chapters in Illinois high school sports history.

Wrestlers meet in four districts

by KEITH REINHARD
Wrestling Editor

Last week they were nearly all together. This week they are scattered to the winds as a new season for wrestling gets underway.

The Herald area's 15 prep mat teams travel to four district sites to begin state tournament action Friday evening. Competition will continue with sectional combat next week before reaching its climax at Assembly Hall in Champaign Feb. 28 with the state finals.

A group of nearly 3,000 hopefuls will be pared to less than 200 and finally to an even dozen. The 12 will reign as individual state champions for the coming year.

There are 243 schools entered in 28 district meets around Illinois this week in the Class AA portion of the state tournament. Six local units — Arlington, Hersey, St. Viator, Fremd, Palatine and Rolling Meadows, along with Dundee — will converge at Crown for sessions at 7 p.m. Friday and 1 p.m. and 7 p.m. Saturday.

Another four area clubs — Elk Grove, Conant, Hoffman Estates and Schaumburg — will hook up with Addison Trail, Elgin Larkin, Lake Park and the hosts at Elgin's district tourney with sessions running at 6:30 tonight and 11 a.m. and 6:30 tomorrow.

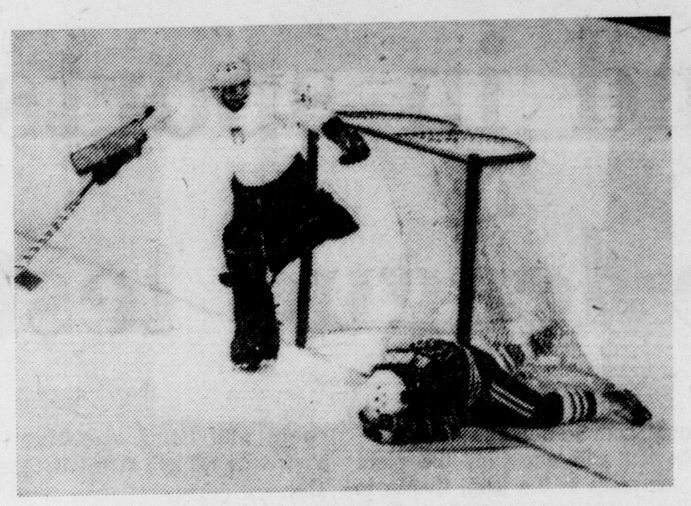

Ridgewood, meanwhile, will host a district meet that includes Forest View, Maine West and St. Viator along with Maines North, East and South, Luther North and Notre Dame. Action will begin at 6:30 p.m. today,

ON YOUR MARK. Mike Reif of Wheeling attempts without success to elude the grip of Hersey's Dan Lococo in the 132-pound championship bout at the Mid-Suburban League meet. Reif, who had issued Lococo his only loss of the season several weeks earlier, was dealt a little vengeance along with a 3-0 setback in the match.

DOWN BUT NOT OUT, U.S. hockey team member Doug Ross holds his head after catching a Polish stick in the face during Americans' 7-2 Olumpic victory Thursday. Ross continued and U.S. is still alive for a medal.

Will Dorothy get 3rd U.S. gold?

INNSBRUCK (UPI) — Dorothy Hamill, second in the last two world championships, is expected to bring America its third gold medal of the Winter Olympics Friday when she competes in the final free skating portion of the women's figure skating program.

Hamill, who hopes to join speed skaters Sheila Young and Peter Mueller as gold medal winners, goes into the final with 10.0 ordinals and 88.40 points against the 25.5-86.44 of Holland's Diane de Leeuw, the reigning world champion who lives in Paramount, Calif. The ordinal figure means Hamill has eight of the nine judges voting for her. All she needs is five.

Dorothy, who excels at free skating, will skate 14th in the final with DeLeeuw skating last in the field of 20.

Mueller, the son of a German World War II pilot who spent $5,000 out of his own pocket to prepare for the Olympics, won the 1,000-meter speed skating event Thursday to give the United States its second gold medal of the Winter Games.

Amid a cloud of controversy involving the second doping scandal of the Games, the U.S. hockey team also moved into contention for an unexpected medal by thumping Poland, 7-2, to even its record in the round-robin tournament at 2-2. The Americans have only to beat West Germany in their final game to win a bronze medal.

Mueller, 21, skated the 1,000 in one minute, 19.32 seconds to win the race, which is being contested in the Olympics for the first time, ahead of Norway's Jorn Didriksen and Russia's Valeri Muratov, the world record holder at the distance. Mueller's medal was the ninth won by the U.S., surpassing by one the one total achieved at Sapporo, Japan, four years ago.

Dan Immerfall of Madison, bronze medalist in the 500, finished 12th in the field of 31, while Dan Carroll of St. Louis, still suffering from the after effects of the flu, was 28th.

Russia won the only other gold medal awarded Thursday when its women's cross-country relay team captured the 20-kilometer race. Finland was second and East Germany third while the U.S. was last in the field of nine.

The quietest day of the Games was enlivened by another doping episode, this one involving the Czechoslovakian hockey team. The Czechs were ordered to forfeit their hockey match with Poland after team captain Frantisek Pospisil failed a dope test. The Czechs were permitted to continue in the tournament, as was Pospisil, but team doctor Franz Trefny was thrown out for prescribing his patient codeine tablets, one of the drugs banned by the IOC's medical commission.

Last Monday Russia's Galina Kulakova was stripped of a bronze medal she had won in the women's five-kilometer cross-country race for failing a dope test.

Bulls lose in Cleveland

Jimmy Cleamons flipped in 17 points, including a key foul shot with 34 seconds left Thursday night, to spark the Cleveland Cavaliers to an 86-83 NBA victory over the Chicago Bulls.

The victory kept the defensive-minded Cavs, who have now held their opponents under 100 points in 12 of their last 13 games, in first place in the Central Division.

After Mickey Johnson's two free throws pulled the Bulls to within two points, 85-83 with 1:06 left in the game, Cleamons hit the second of two foul shots to give the Cavs their 30th victory against 22 losses.

The lead changed hand 10 times in the third period before the Cavs went ahead to stay 66-64 on a pair of foul shots by Campy Russell with :34 left in the third stanza.

Russell chipped in with 14 points for Cleveland while Bob Love, John Laskowski and Jack Marin each got 18 points for the Bulls.

Evert is top woman jock

Charming Chris Evert, a 21-year-old tennis pro who earned a record $352,227 for one season last year, was named today the first winner of the Haig and Haig Woman Athlete of the World award.

Evert, of Fort Lauderdale, Fla., numbered the United States, French and Italian Opens among her tennis titles in 1975.

She collected 620 points in balloting by an international panel of sports writers to win a $10,000 prize and a sterling silver trophy. Evert will receive the awards at a luncheon in New York March 19.

Francie Larrieu, the 22-year-old UCLA junior from Los Angeles who set American outdoor and indoor records in the 1,500 meters and mile run, was second in the balloting with 318 points.

Swimmer Shirley Babashoff of Fountain Valley, Calif., who distinguished herself in the 1975 Pan American Games with six medals, including two gold, was third with 219 points, Austrian skier Annemarie Proell Moser turned in brilliant performances on the slopes last winter and received 137 points for fourth player. Wimbledon champion Billie Jean King of San Mateo, Calif., was fifth with 72 points.

That ain't no hay!

Accumulating manure, which was becoming a health problem at Golden Gate Fields race track during a strike, was carted out Thursday under police escort.

About 200 tons of manure and dirty hay was trucked out through the picket lines under the watchful eyes of Berkeley police and California Highway Patrol officers.

There was no racing because of the week-long walkout, but some progress was being made in negotiations between track owners and employes.

The track said agreement has been reached with operating engineers, painters and horseshoers. However, the kitchen workers and janitors were dissatisfied and walked out of talks early Thursday. The track's 92-day racing meet was scheduled to open last Friday.

Bowlers

that we'll come out at the top," said the Mustangs' coach.

Competition gets under way today at 8 a.m. when 16 of the 32 finalists take to the alleys for first-round action. The remaining 16 teams will roll their three-game series at 11 a.m.

The field will be paired to 16 teams for the quarterfinals this afternoon at 2:00. From the quarterfinal round, eight teams will advance to the semi-finals, which will get underway at 9 a.m. Saturday. The four surviving teams will meet in the finals at 1 p.m. Saturday.

Each team may include 10 bowlers on its tournament squad, but only five may bowl in each round. Each bowler will roll a three-game series per round. Total team pinfall through completion of each round will determine the team's advancing to the next round. The champion will be the team posting the highest total pinfall for the four rounds of competition.

'Trotters at NIU

The "magicians of basketball" will play at the recently expanded Evans Fieldhouse along with three half-time variety acts. An exhibition game against the New Jersey Reds will begin at 7:30 p.m.

Reserved seat tickets, $5.00 for adults and $3.50 for students with IDs, went on sale Friday, Feb. 6 in Rockford, Sycamore and DeKalb and will also be available the night of the game at Evans Fieldhouse at 6:00 p.m.

'The Snake' brings home 30 grand in six seconds

Jim Murray

I always thought they called it "drag" racing because that's what it was.

But, racing is hardly a drag when you make $300,000 a year out of it.

I always thought a "top fuel eliminator" was the 8-cylinder gas-guzzling bucket of bolts I drive around. I never thought of fuel eliminating as a sport.

But Donald Ray Prudhomme makes more money doing less in a car than any automotive genius who ever lived. Not A. J. Foyt, not Henry Ford, Gustav Daimler or the inventor of the self-starter or chairman of the board of General Motors gets as much money out of the internal combustion engine as he does — $6,000 a second.

By comparison, A. J. Foyt works the black gang in the hold of a ship for his money. Franco Harris is a steeplejack walking steel beams in 100 m.p.h. winds by comparison.

Foyt drives 500 miles at a crack for his millions. Don Prudhomme drives 1,320 feet. Foyt's drives laid end to end would probably stretch around the world several times. Prudhomme's wouldn't take you to the drugstore. Some people take longer to back out of a driveway than he does to win 30 grand.

And, talk about fuel eliminating! Some Indianapolis 500 cars get 2.8 miles to the gallon. Stocks get four. Dragsters get 188 feet to the gallon. They use up seven gallons every six seconds, every quarter-mile run. This is undoubtedly the most expensive 1,320 feet in the world. Because drag fuel costs $7 a gallon. Since the car starts with 11 gallons on the start line, and proceeds to use it all up at the rate of nearly two gallons per second, a run is really a drag for the party paying the fuel bills. I mean, how would you like to have to say "Fill it up" every six seconds?

They call Don Prudhomme "The Snake," because of the speed with which he strikes at the start line. Also, because he is so cool, he seems to have no body temperature.

He is the best there is at his sport. He is the only man in history to break the 6-second standard in his specialty. His run of 5.98 seconds last year set the world record of 241.43 m.p.h.

Drag racing is a sport in which a guy comes out with a machine that looks like a cross between a praying mantis with baby carriage wheels, and/or a giraffe who has just been beat over the head and sprawled forward, and they refer to these Martian vehicles simply as "dragsters" or "fuel eliminators." They look more suitable for a moon walk than a race.

Then, they come out with only slightly modified sedans which don't look too dissimilar to street jalopies and these they call "funny cars." The Snake drives funny cars.

Drag racing is a sport which began on a strip along Sepulveda Blvd. at 2 o'clock in the morning back before the war where first prize was a night in jail and the clockers were cops. It has grown into a $3 million run for the money each year, and more than 5.3 million people paid to see it last year, an astonishing turnout for a sport in which the hero is a sparkplug and the action goes by so fast it makes the one-round knockout seem like a marathon.

The U.S. Army is The Snake's principal sponsor and his car is a 240-m.p.h. recruiting poster, a far cry from the old "Uncle Sam Wants You" cardboard cutouts in the post offices. But, the Army gets in a lot more winning circles with Prudhomme than it does with the State Department.

The Snake won six of eight "nationals," or major tournaments last year, and the world championship points in his sport. You might say he's the Jack Nicklaus of drag racing — except that Jack walks five miles a day for four days for his money. The distance the Snake goes would probably be just a full drive or a spoon and an eight iron for Jack.

The Snake may have to work as much as a full 80 seconds this year.

Flu hits Buffalo Grove; Hersey to visit tonight

by ART MUGALIAN

When a team prepares for a "Friday the 13th" game, it only stands to reason that a certain amount of bad luck will cross its path during the week.

For Buffalo Grove's basketball team, the ill fortune is ill health.

The Bison's big game is tonight against visiting Hersey. If they win, the Bison will clinch their first Mid-Suburban North cage title by moving three full games ahead of Hersey with just one left to play.

But sickness has taken its toll.

"We haven't been able to have a regular practice all week — that's how many kids are out with the flu," said Buffalo Grove coach Paul Grady. "It won't be hard to pick a starting five for Friday. It'll probably be the five who are available."

The Bison-Huskie clash is just one of six MSL games on the slate for tonight. The others feature Schaumburg (8-2) at Prospect (4-6), Hoffman Estates (3-6 at Conant (7-2), Forest View (3-6) at Elk Grove (5-4), Wheeling (4-4) at Arlington (5-3), and Palatine (0p8) at Fremd (1-7). All games are set for 8 p.m.

A week ago, tonight's game between undefeated Buffalo Grove (the Bison are 8-0 in the North) and second-place Hersey loomed as the season's biggest contest. But the Huskies, also riddled by illness, fell to Arlington on Friday, dashing any realistic hopes for a Hersey title.

Now, Buffalo Grove would have to lose its two remaining games and the Huskies, now 6-2, would have to win theirs to force a tie. The Bison beat Hersey 47-41 in January.

"We have no intentions of losing to Hersey," said Buffalo Grove's Grady, who refused to use the illness factor as a copout. "I'm counting on having everyone back by Friday. But having them back and having them healthy are two different things."

Grady is especially concerned about the effect a long layoff will have on all-state candidate Brian Allsmiller, who is currently locked with Palatine's Kevin McKenna in a torrid battle for the league scoring crown. Allsmiller is averaging 25.3 and McKenna 25.1.

As the spotlight shifts away from the North division, it focuses keenly on the South's wire-to-wire race matching Schaumburg and Conant. Both teams have key games tonight before they can look ahead to next Tuesday's Saxon-Cougar showdown at Schaumburg.

The Saxons of coach Joe Breault are 18-3 over-all, including a tough 58-55 victory over Prospect the first time the teams met. The Knights have already served in the role of spoiler by bumping Elk Grove from the race with a 66-52 win last Saturday.

Conant faces an improved Hoffman team that beat Forest View and Rolling Meadows last weekend. Hawk coach Jerry Segebrecht promises a better game than the 56-42 loss to Conant the first time around.

"I think this game's going to be a lot closer," Segebrecht predicted. "We're looking forward to it — the crosstown rivalry and everything."

Hoffman's recent success has come on the strength of good shooting, added confidence, and the inspired play of junior Ron Warring.

"I think they've finally realized that they're capable of playing good ball," Segebrecht said. "Now even when the other team puts pressure on us, we're able to hold ourselves together."

Radio coverage

WWMM-FM (92.7) will have its microphones at Buffalo Grove High School tonight when the host Bison battle Hersey in Mid-Suburban League North basketball.

Bob Houghton of WWMM will call the plays and Bob Frisk of The Herald will give the color commentary. Air time is 8 p.m. at 92.7 FM.

Forest View's game with Elk Grove will be covered on WFVH-FM (88.3), starting at 7:45 p.m.

Maine West home tonight

The Maine West Warriors will try to regroup tonight to get back on the winning track after a pair of losses has knocked them out of the Central Suburban League South title race.

The Warriors host lowly Glenbrook South, 2-9 in loop play compared to the Warriors mark of 7-4.

After challenging for the league lead all season, West fell out of the race after recent losses to league leader Niles west and then 2-8 Glenbrook North. So the Warriors are now three games behind Niles West with two games remaining on their league schedule.

Game time tonight at the Warrior gym is 8 p.m.

St. Patrick visits Lions

The St. Viator Lions entertain St. Patrick High School tonight in an East Suburban Catholic Conference contest scheduled for 8 p.m. at the Viator gym.

The Shamrocks beat Viator badly the first time the two teams met this season, posting a 91-61 win. The loss put the Lions at 3-10 won-lost mark, but since then Viator has been playing improved ball, posting a 4-3 mark.

The Lions are in fourth place in the ESCC with a 6-5 mark, just behind the Shamrocks who are 8-3.

Huskies, 'Cats capture wins in tournament

by PAUL LOGAN

Hersey and Wheeling posted victories in their first-round games at the Hersey hosted girls' basketball invitational tournament Thursday.

It marked the first win in five tries for the Hersey Huskies. The Wheeling Wildcats have also played as many games, winning all of them. Both teams advanced to the second round.

Hersey coach Meg Putnam installed a rotational offense to give her team more movement and it paid dividends with a 43-38 winner, Downers Grove South.

Earlier in the morning, Wheeling coach Donna Dubbelde saw her team nearly blow a 31-19 halftime lead with a shakey third quarter before battling back for a 51-41 decision over Glenbrook North.

Huskies Nancy Gawell and Linda Davis helped their team to a 28-18 advantage at intermission with 12 and eight points, respectively. Downers Grove rallied in the second half with eight straight unanswered points in the fourth quarter to pull within two, 36-34.

Debbie Barnd's long shot and a rebounded basket by Jody Stembridge helped Hersey hold off Downers' late rally.

Putnam has four letter winners among her starting five in Terry Ciffone, Gawell, Stembridge and Davis.

Gawell, who led the team with 15 points, is one of Hersey's top rebounders along with Davis and Stembridge. Ciffone, who hit for 10 points to match Davis' output, is the Huskies' outside threat.

Hersey's coach said her team's strength was "being really tough defensively. They play a zone defense very well." She added that although the Huskies were 1-4, their losses were against very tough opponents.

Wheeling accounted for one of Hersey's setbacks. The Wildcats have rolled up the victories this year despite the absence of all-conference sophomore center Sandy Rainey.

Rainey, who had a cast removed from left leg last Friday, played for the second time against Glenbrook. Although she played briefly, it helped her team hold off a talented Spartan team.

LeAnn Paulsen's four field goals in five attempts late in the second quarter and Rainey's clutch rebounding lifted the Wildcats to a 31-19 halftime lead.

Wheeling which only scored two baskets in the third quarter, needed an eight-point splurge by guard Gina Neri in the final period to hold off Glenbrook.

Dubbelde said Neri played the best over-all game, finishing with 16 points. Paulsen had 12 and Rainey eight.

"I think just hustlinig," said the Wildcat coach in answer to what her team does best. "We're not big and so we can't be physical.

"One of our biggest problems has been hitting free throws. I'm at a point where I'd do just about anything for a free throw."

Wheeling has been shooting about 30 per cent from the foul line despite practicing free throws before, during and after practice. Last year the Wildcats lost by one point to perennial Mid-Suburban League champion Fremd. They missed 17 foul shots in that game! This season's big Fremd battle will be Feb. 19.

(See scoreboard for statistics from Hersey tourney as well as MSL games.)

YMCA wrestling tourney

The Northwest Suburban YMCA at 300 E. Northwest Hwy. in Des Plaines will hold a boys wrestling tournament Saturday, Feb. 21. All members, 17-years old and under are welcome to enter the tournament.

Awards will be given to the first, second and third place finishers in each age and weight group. All boys interested in wrestling should contact Don Quinlan at the Northwest YMCA, 296-3376.

Balanced attack keys Harper win

by DOUG PALM

Patience has its price.

The Harper College Hawks were willing to pay that price Thursday night and reaped the benefits of victory in a come-from-behind 89-77 win against Triton.

Down by one point at halftime, 45-44, Harper relied on its balanced offense and team defense to wear down the visiting Trojans en route to a 45-32 second half margin and victory.

It was a see-saw affair until Harper Coach Roger Bechtold called a time-out with 6:45 remaining and the score deadlocked at 73-all.

To that point there had been 20 different lead changes and the deadlock was the game's fifth.

Bechtold's strategy, as he revealed afterwards, was simply to remind his charging Hawks to "maintain their poise, run the offense, and when we got the momentum, going, walk the ball down and be deliberate."

Harper's timeout proved highly critical, as the Hawks proceeded to outhustle and out-finesse their tiring opponents the rest of the way. Harper outscored Triton 16-4 down the stretch, including a 10-0 whitewashing over a two-minute span following that timeout.

For the game, all five Hawk starters scored in double figures, paced by center Scott Green's 22 points.

The front line of Green, Waliy Butman and Jim Arden was especially effective in that second-half drive, as they gained control of the boards and dominated their opponents inside on defense.

The victory upped Harper's record to 11-14 on the season, while Triton fell to 11-15.

Sports night to spotlight Bear, Bull stars

Doug Buffone and Jerry Sloan will be spotlighted tonight at the St. James Parents' Club Sports Night.

Buffone, the Chicago Bears' superb linebacker, and Sloan, the Chicago Bulls' star guard, will speak at the St. James Parish Center, 800 N. Arlington Heights Rd., Arlington Heights, beginning at 7:30 p.m.

Following the talks, there will be a question and answer period. The evening will also be highlighted by a film called "Chicago Bear Bloopers."

The event is open to non-parishioners. Adult tickets are $2 and children are $1. Children under 12 must be accompanied by an adult. Tickets can be purchased at the door or by calling 392-2098.

There will be door prizes, refreshments and autographed pictures for those in attendance.

Swimming

Busse of Prospect is also a threat in the race.

In the 50-yard freestyle, Rolling Meadow's Tom Stahnke is a narrow favorite to retain his conference title, but Hersey's Dick Hawes has been coming on strong lately and could challenge.

Stahnke is also favored in the butterfly, which follows the 50-yard freestyle. Tom Cole of Prospect also figures in the race.

It's just about anybody's race again in the fast heat of the 100-yard freestyle. In the 500-free, Tague again is the heavy favorite, outdistancing his nearest opponent in seed times by 24.5 seconds.

The 100-yard backstroke pits top-seeded Mike Yaskey of Buffalo Grove against Spencer Gilchrist of Prospect. Right behind is Jim Cashman of Elk Grove who has been coming on very strong and could be a darkhorse favorite.

Only one swimmer has met the minimum state qualifying time so far in the breaststroke, Arlington's Mike Roessler.

Roessler will be challenged by Busse and Jim Kantecki of Forest View. Another challenger will be Roessler's brother, Steve.

The battle in the free relay should come down to between Arlington and Elk Grove, but Wheeling or Buffalo Grove, in the same heat, could also challenge.

Wrestlers in district assignments and 1 p.m. and 6:30 p.m. Saturday and these same times prevail at Highland Park where Buffalo Grove and Wheeling are to be joined by Barrington, Deerfield, Lake Forest, Lake Zurich, Glenbrook North and Stevenson.

By late tomorrow evening there will be two qualifiers at each of the 12 weights emerging from all of these district meetings as well as the 24 others in Illinois. These champs and runnersup have a date next weekend for sectional competition and the final eliminating process prior to those state finals.

How will it all come out? Here are some names to watch for at the four districts involving Lion, Warrior and Mid-Suburban League grapplers:

CROWN

Hersey, fresh from wrapping up another conference title, and Dundee have to be rated the favorites to nab team honors at this gathering dominated by the Huskies last year.

At 98 pounds Roger Peterson of Dundee (14-12) would appear to be a good bet to hook up with Fremd's Jeff Arnold (15-7) in the finals of a relatively weak weight class. Chris Milligan of Dundee (21-4) gets the favored nod at 105, where Arlington's Paul Preissing (17-8), Viator's Scott Malouf and Fremd's Bob Dean (13-8-1) are othe topnotch contenders.

The 112 runoff will be a toughie. Returning district qualifiers Joe Spence of Crown (28-4) and Rick Fitzgerald of Dundee (20-3) must contend with Arlington's Dan Weber (21-5). Huskie Dan Sepke (13-10-3) can't be ruled out either.

Jim Carlstrom of Meadows ruled the 112-pound fieild last year and will be back to capture the 119-pound title won by his graduating brother Roy. Ready to unseat him, as he did in the conference meet, is Jim Watters of Hersey, who also qualified in 1975. Lion Tim Jordan makes it a three-way race.

John Preissing of Arlington (17-4-1) and Doug McCarthy of Fremd (20-7) along with Dundee's Mario Hewlett (12-7-1) are the frontrunners at 126. Preissing is the defending titlist.

Huskie Dan Lococo, with only one loss, is favored at 132. His chief threat could be Dan Kennedy of Arlington (20-8) or Crown's Dennis Cohn (16-6). Lococo qualified at 126 last year.

The 138 division has Hersey's Brett Benz (22-6), St. Viator's Rich Somers (15-6-1) who qualified in '75, Dundee's Dave Helminski (18-2-1) and John Whitnell of Arlington (15-13-1). Pick two.

The best bets at 145 are Pete Martin of Meadows (26-7) and Hersey's Rick Dewar (14-8-1) with Palatine's Terry Sullivan (14-11) and Dundee's Rick Lutzow (9-8-1) running on the outside. A wide open field at 155 features Russ Pollard of Fremd (17-9-2), Jim Popp of Palatine (19-10-1), Jim Harrington of Meadows (19-12) and Mike Murphy of Dundee (11-7).

An interesting race could develop at 167 with Crown's Mike Compton (17-3), Dundee's Blaine Domich and Mustang Ted Tyk (20-8-2) challenging MSL champ Pirate Brian DeWyze.

Another MSL winner heads up the race at 185 in Hersey's John Haney. The opposition here includes Dundee's Randy Helter (16-8), St. Viator's Dan Yourg and Palatine's John Olszewski.

At heavyweight the big battle appears to be shaping up between Scott Zettek of the Lions and Dundee's Marc Bennett (24-2). Huskie Bill Fletcher and Arlington's Kirk Kennedy, who qualifiedi last year, are longshot possibilities.

ELGIN

Addison Trail will no doubt repeat as team champ, but there is sufficient talent spread out among the other entries to severely curtail the number of Blazer qualifiers. The 98 runoff will be dynamite with Elgin's Rich Campbell (22-5), Addison's Tom Pawelko (24-3), Hoffmans Darcy Rice and Schaumburg's Dave Cooke heading up the hunt.

Defending 98-pound champ Bob Linard of the Blazers at 11-9-1 is not the favorite this year at 105 where Schaumburg's Al Blount and Conant's John Gluck will be aiming for a rematch of their MSL showdown. Bill Lancaster of Elk Grove cannot be ruled out either.

At 112 Addison Trail's Gary Varga (22-4) is easily the best bet with Grenadier Steve King (15-11) running a distant second. Look for returning qualifier Louie DeLaCruz of Larkin (21-1) to top off a 119-pound division that also includes AT's Gary Dini (7-5) and Conant's Ed Armstrong.

Kevin Cortez of Addison Trail, returning champ, brings a 30-1 ledger into the action at 126 including 22 pins. His likely foe in the finals will be Lake Park's Bob Velasquez (20-3-1). At 132 the list of top hopefuls includes Blazer Rich Berg (22-7), Larkin's Steve Winesburg (21-2), Lake Park's Dave Loder (12-7-1) and Cougar Brian Regan (25-7-1).

John Carpenter of Elk Grove and Ron Burhite of Conant could stage a rematch of their 138-pound MSL title showdown in the finals but not if Blazer Ed Kukulski (14-10) has anything to say about it. A blue chip field at 145 is headed up by Hoffman's Chad McCreary (who won at 138 last year), Conant's Tim Goergen and Gary Cochran of the Royals (18-3-1).

Hawk Jim Thomas also qualified as a runnerup in '75 and he'll get top billing at 155, although not by much over Dave Lopez of Elgin (24-2-2) and AT's Bob Grubb (28-3). Bill Sleboda of the Blazers (25-2-1) is the only 167 pounder of note with the other qualifying perch strictly up for grabs.

At 185 Larkin's Jim Genz (22-2-1) is ranked No. 1 and will probably pair off in the finals against either Wayne Stoltzman of Elk Grove, Saxon Gary Bolger or Steve Remy (10-4) or Shawn McGady (9-7-1) of Addison Trail. The best three heavyweights are probably John Cobos of Addison (25-6), Walt Porter of the Hawks (16-8-2) and Gren Mike Malone (14-8).

RIDGEWOOD

Maine West and Maine East are the top team threats. The Warriors beat out Forest View handily last year for top laurels. Individually at 98 West's Tom Krauser is the returning champ but will have to battle off Ridgewood's Russ Valin (21-6) and Maine East's Mike Stein (17-5) to retain that spot.

At 105 there are Rob Kruzinski of the Warriors and Rick Blackman of Luther North along with Tim Cummings of Maine North (19-9), Bryan Boliaux of the Demons (13-10) and Notre Dame's Paul DeBoo. It could go any way.

Possibly the top contenders in a not-too-strong 112 field are Brian Butler of Ridgewood (18-7) and East's Mike Silcroft. At 119 the going gets tougher, especially if Warrior Mike Tramel comes down to tangle with Sean Carroll of Maine South (13-1), Skip Lombardo of Maine North (16-3), Joe Scarpelli of the Rebels (17-7-1) and Forest View's Tom Smith (15-11).

Hawk Phil Metcalf (13-8-2) and Norseman Jack Beals (20-7-1) are the only 126 pounders of merit. Metcalf's teammate Kurt Fiech (22-1) tops a 132-pound arena that also includes Rick Romano of the Dons and Warrior Louie DePasquale.

At 138 the main bout could pit North's Bob Tucibat (23-4-1) against host entry Todd Bougart (19-3-1) unless East's Russ Carlins (17-10) has other ideas. Returning Blue Demon qualifier Mike Fiorio (16-8-1) will be in a tough bracket with Steve Marx of Ridgewood (17-8) and either Dan Cavazos or Dan Barringer of the Warriors.

One of those West matmen will move up to 155 where the chief competition is Bob Tramutola of Maine North (18-6-1), Tony Giannini of Ridgewood (15-5), East's Guy Boliaux and Notre Dame's Mark Romano.

The coast is probably clear for Rebel Gino Agostinelli (21-6) and Prospect's Carl Schimmelman to clash at 167. Likewise at 185 the feature stands to be between South's John Carroll (13-5-1) and Dave Cavazos of Maine West (11-3).

At heavyweight top seeding should be afforded Warrior Bob Smith (17-5-2) and Demon Brian Shields (16-8-3) but Knight Don Meyer will want to be accounted for.

HIGHLAND PARK

Conference champs Barrington and the host Little Giants figure to dominate the team picture although Buffalo Grove, the defending champs, or Glenbrook North can't be ruled out.

The 98 field is surprisingly weak with Lake Fores's Dave Kramel (27-1), Barrington's Tom Ujiiye (12-5) and GBN's Phil Kiefer (15-7-2) the top prospects. The situation is not much stronger at 105 where Ken Makoski of the Bronchos (12-9) and Parker Tom Lembeck (17-10) will contend with Wheeling's Ray Auger (13-12-1).

At 112 things tighten up considerably. Bison Tim Foley, who qualified at 105 last time, must contend with Giant Billy Clark (25-3-1) who is also a vet qualifier, Barrington's Pat Connolly (14-9), Spartan Dave Gimbel (20-8), Deerfield's Dean Chudy (19-10) and Wildcat Pat Kamins (15-8-1.

A strong possibility for the 119 pound title could be John Minorini of the hosts (25-3). At 126 undefeated Bison Rich Wilhelm must turn back Broncho Jim Adams (21-7-1), Warrior Jesse MacDougall (23-8) and Lake Zurich's Rick Gomez for a repeat sectional trip.

A nicely balanced 132-pound division includes Buffalo Grove's Greg Thomson (27-6), Wheeling's Mike Rief (19-7-1), Deerfield's John Lample (26-4), Barrington's Chuck Walsh (20-4) and Glenbrook's Carl Schulz (10-3). The 138-pound finals will probably pit Broncho Bob Moore (24-3-1) against Lino Labalarte of Highland Park (17-8).

Bison Doug Browning, who won at 138 last winter, shouldn't have much difficulty repeating at 145. The 155-pound action is going to be more intense, however, with Al Adams of Barrington (24-3), Mark Freeburg of the Giants (18-4) Spartan Steve Briggs (17-10), Grove's Bob Fechtner (20-9-1) and 'Cat Dave Pearlman (18-9-1) in the ring.

At 167 Eric Moll of the Bronchos (23-3) versus Parker Chuck Hull (21-3) would make a great feature, but a healthy Curt Rathje of Wheeling could upset this plan.

Rick Giese of the hosts (26-3), GBN's Doug Binzel (19-8-1) and Brian Gibbons of the Bison (25-7) are chief 185 pound contenders while at heavyweight the best appear to be Ken Kent of Wheeling, Randy Kuhn of Lake Zurich and little Giant Dave Pearson (21-7-2)

Warriors 'swim through' conference meet tonight

by BOB GALLAS
Swimming Editor

Maine West swimmers hope for a good showing, but plan to "swim through" tonight's Central Suburban League South conference meet.

The swimming finals will begin at 7 p.m. at Glenbrook South High School. Diving preliminaries and finals will start at 1:45 p.m. today at Glenbrook South.

"We feel our one big meet this year is the district meet, not conference," said Maine West coach Scott Chovanec. Chovanec explained that he felt the Warriors' toughest competition in the district meet will be the same schools in tonight's conference meet, Glenbrook South and Maine East. So rather than peak for tonight's meet, Chovanec's strategy is concentrating on a good performance next week in the Glenview District.

"I think we'll have some good times in the conference meet," said Chovanec. "But I think the best will come at the district meet."

"The state meet is anti-climactic for us," Chovanec explained. "We know we won't have any state winners, so we'll have to do it all at the districts," he said.

Chovanec is expecting some good performances tonight and next week from a number of swimmers, including Tom Ptach and Jim Ritzema, the Warriors' solid one-two punch in the 200-yard freestyle.

Randy Roel is also expected to turn in some good times in the backstroke. Chovanec is also hoping his team will do well in the free relay.
